

"Can you imagine this Lady Wonder wanting to be a human?"
"Seems obvious she's got no horse sense."

LADY WONDER DOESN'T BLUNDER

Typing Equine Teaches Scribe Something About 'Horse Sense'

The continent's curiosity has been aroused by Lady Wonder, Richmond's "talking" horse. Police credit the animal with giving them a clue to finding a Massachusetts child, missing for nearly two years. Hard to believe? Associated Press reporter Paul Duke thought so too, so he paid a visit to Lady's stall for an "interview." Here's what he found.

By PAUL DUKE

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 9 (AP)—So you're skeptical about Lady Wonder, Richmond's incredible "talking" horse?

So was this reporter when he went out to "interview" her.

A horse that can predict the future and reel off facts like a child prodigy? Bunk, I thought. But after a half-hour's "chat" with Lady I came away from her stall wondering whether there isn't more fact than fiction to horse sense.

Lots of other folk are wondering the same thing now that Lady has been credited with providing the "tip" that led to discovery of the body of Danny Matson, a four-year-old child missing from his Quinby, Mass., home for nearly two years.

Since Sunday, Lady's mistress, Claudia Fonda, has been deluged with calls from persons who want the 27-year-old horse quizzed on everything from stolen bicycles to wildcat oil wells.

Mrs. Fonda won't take the requests by telephone, declaring that Lady is not at her best unless the questioner is on hand to get the answer straight from the horse's mouth.

Lady flabbergasted me when she correctly answered most of the 15 questions I fired at her.

She does her answering by poking her chin at levers extending out from tiny slides containing numbers and letters. When she touches the levers, the numbers and letters shoot up, spelling out her answers.

Mrs. Fonda stood beside Lady, repeating the questions into the mare's ear.

Lady started out perfectly by pecking out my name. When I asked her where I was born, she spelled out Bethlehem, Pa.—the right answer. When I asked her how much money I make weekly, she gave the exact dollars-and-cents figure.

She flubbed it when I asked her where I went to school. But two questions later, she named the school in a delayed-action reply.

Lady has been playing this question-and-answer game—for more than 20 years. The folks who visit her at Mrs. Fonda's small frame house on the edge of town get three questions for $1.

In 1928, two Duke University psychology professors tested her and concluded:

"There appear to be no loopholes, no reasonable possibility for signalling, either of a conscious or unconscious character."

In 1946, Dr. Thomas L. Garrett, New York psychologist, said he could find "no trickery involved."

I thought about a tip-off system between Lady and her mistress. But she has answered questions when Mrs. Fonda wasn't nearby. How does Lady do it?

I asked Lady that.

She slowly spelled out "m-i-n-d."

I asked her if she'd like to be a human.

"Yes," came the answer.

Royal Family Arranging Yule Party

LONDON, Dec. 9 (Reuters)—The Royal Family is preparing for its usual Christmas party at Sandringham, the Queen's Norfolk estate, court circles said today.

The Queen will follow family tradition by broadcasting to the Commonwealth Christmas Day.

Her two children, Prince Charles, 4, and Princess Anne, 2, will have two young cousins with them at Sandringham: Prince William, 11, and Prince Richard, 8, sons of the Duke of Gloucester.

The family party will also include Queen Mother Elizabeth, Princess Margaret, Queen Mary, who has recovered from a cold which confined her to her home for a month, and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

Interior I.W.A. Will Settle For '52 Wages

VANCOUVER, Dec. 9 (CP)—Recommendation that they renew last year's wage contract will be made to woodworkers in British Columbia's southern interior by their union policy committee.

But the International Woodworkers of America, C.C.L., will not take the recommendation to its interior membership until operators have reopened their mills.

L. J. A. Tees, spokesman for the operators, said the I.W.A.'s proposal, made by I.W.A. president Stewart Alsburg, will be forwarded to interior operators "but we are sure they will not accept it."

"The lumber mills will not open until the union has signed the contract," he said.

Both statements were made following a meeting before the provincial Labor Relations Board. Operators will give their official answer to the union proposal at a meeting before the board Dec. 11.

The I.W.A. had demanded an increase of 3½ cents an hour on top of the present basic wage of $1.29½ hourly, and three paid statutory holidays.

Foreign Legion Flying Into Riot-Torn Morocco

50 Dead, 200 Wounded; Whites Being Evacuated

CASABLANCA, Morocco, Dec. 9 (CP)—Police today began a large-scale evacuation of French and other Europeans residents from native-populated quarters of this nationalist-troubled North African metropolis after bloody rioting killed 50 persons.

The evacuees were moved to safer residential quarters.

Latest police figures indicated 50 persons including eight Europeans had been killed in the widespread rioting Sunday and Monday and that 74 persons had been wounded, including seven Europeans.

Reuters placed the wounded figure at more than 200 and said 60 were in hospitals. The news agency reported eight Europeans were killed and 12 were wounded. To prevent new outbreaks of rioting, the French flew 400 Foreign Legion troops to this city of 600,000.

The Legionnaires were brought in four planes from Agadir, 270 miles from this city of 600,000. Tanks and armored cars patrolled the streets and tightly ringed the Arab quarter where the rioting first broke out Sunday.

Some of the Europeans were so brutally attacked that even their sex could not be determined. Others were "torn to pieces and burned."

The mobs—whipped up by leaders' protests against the murder last week of a labor leader in the adjoining protectorate of Tunisia—wielded razor blades fixed on sticks, shotguns sharpened to dagger-keenness, and swung heavy iron balls on chains to crack skulls. Others grabbed bricks and knuckle-dusters.

Three labor leaders who Monday "demanded the murder of 'traitors' to the Moroccan independence movement were among about 140 natives arrested by the police.

Nearly Reaches Revolutionary Fury

The disorders, which reached nearly revolutionary proportions, broke in sympathy with Tunisian workers whose leader, Farhat Hached, was machine-gunned and beaten to death last week.

Demonstrators attacked a European couple and their three small children today as they drove in a truck along a street.

The woman was hurt on the head and her husband on the arm, but they managed to reach their home.

The local Moroccan pasha sent criers into the town pleading with the merchants to keep shops open to provide food supplies.

Police laid virtual siege to headquarters of the General Labor Federation, reported to be communist-controlled, where several hundred demonstrators took refuge when Moroccan soldiers charged them Monday.

Gen. Augustin Guillaume, the protectorate's French resident general, announced in Rabat that all measures necessary for security were being taken.

Meanwhile, in Tunis, the other trouble spot of French North Africa, the French authorities lifted the 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew established Dec. 5 when Hached's death was announced.

Moroccan Outbreak Threatens World Peace

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Events of the last few hours dramatically point up not only the enormity of the task facing President-elect Eisenhower but also the appalling speed with which these events move.

Thus, while Eisenhower and his aides consider the future course of the U.S. in Korea and policy toward the Orient, a long-feared explosion shakes French North Africa.

Centre of the explosion is Morocco in which America has built giant air bases as vital links in the defense chain against Russia.

Shockwaves from the Moroccan flare-up could seriously endanger the French home government which already has been embarrassed by having its troubles with Tunisian and Moroccan nationalists aired in United Nations debate.

Reduce French contributions to N.A.T.O. and the unified defense of Europe.

Further antagonize the Arab world which is lined up solidly with Tunisian and Moroccan nationalists, thus complicating hopes for unified command for Middle East defense with Arab participation.

Furnish new grist for the Communist propaganda mill, particularly as it attacks the west in its Arab-language broadcasts to the oil-rich, Middle East nations.

Finally, disrupt vital oil shipments from the Middle Eastern fields to Allied Far Eastern bases, ultimately affecting even United States operations in Korea.

The latter point, it may be hoped, probably is far-fetched. But such a linking of events does illustrate both the global nature and the enormity of the task facing United States planners.

WALL OF PREJUDICE?

Vulture's Claw On 'Peace Dove'

Exclusive on Vancouver Island

Following is one of a series of articles by a well-known Montreal editor and publisher who spent September behind the Iron Curtain with an invitation to the World Peace Congress in Peking. Filion is editor of Le Devoir, a French language newspaper noted for its controversial attitude on current problems.

October 1 is the national holiday of the new China. It is called the day of liberation in Chinese. Last Oct. 1 was the third anniversary of Mao-Tse-tung's ascent to power. Delegates to the peace congress, therefore, were invited to take part in the celebrations. The show was well worth seeing. In fact it made the whole peace congress worth-while.

On the eve of the holiday there was a banquet for 2,000 in the hall of the Winter Palace where the meetings were taking place. Mao-Tse-tung presided at the head table and proposed innumerable toasts himself. Around him were his intimates and the guests of honor, mostly accredited diplomats from the people's democracies.

The hall was jam-packed with representatives of all the provinces and all the associations in China. Delegates from national minorities were given good seats. In China there are more than 100 million people who are not Chinese. These are the four great minorities, the Tibetans, the Turks, the Mongols and the Manchurians plus the 50-odd semi-barbarian tribes who live in the mountains where they have been driven by the Chinese over the course of the centuries. I met a chieftain of the Lolos, a friend of my sister's, who spent 30 years as a missionary sister in the Szechouan region.

The tables were groaning with sumptuous food and with the magnificent wines of China. We drank an uncountable number of toasts to Mao-Tse-tung, to the new China, to peace, to the people's democracies and to many other things. It was extraordinary. There were no speeches. We had to get to bed early for the celebrations the following day.

Doctors Fined $5,500; One Gets Jail Term

Charged With Health Scheme Defrauding

KENORA, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)—Three young doctors were fined a total of $5,500 Monday and one was sentenced to three months in jail when they pleaded guilty to fraud in obtaining money from a health scheme which should have been paid by patients.

They are:

Dr. Peter Playfair, 33, who was sentenced to three months and fined $2,500 and costs, or serve an additional three months in default, on five charges of false pretences.

Dr. Earl S. Bryngelson, 25, and Dr. Allan M. Torrie, 29, who were fined $1,500 each with the alternative of three months in jail, on the charges.

The amount involved in each charge was $4.

The charges were laid by L. A. Toole, chief Canadian agent of the Benefit Association of Railway Employees which handles the health scheme for employees of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company.

'STARTLING'

Crown Attorney B. A. Taylor said the scheme was startling. Under the health scheme contract, the patient must pay for the first two calls from the physician; the insurance scheme paid all subsequent bills.

He said that of 44 claims picked at random 42 were found to be fraudulent and each contained from one to two fictitious calls.

"These doctors systematically and ruthlessly milked the company insurance scheme of money that should have been paid by the patients," he said.

Defense counsel W. F. Rogers said the doctors' action "was not a crime because they were poor doctors but because they were poor business men." He said the doctors' gross error was their judgment arising from inexperience in business affairs. They had not received money to which they were not entitled.

"The insurance company is looking for blood and somebody has got to bear the brunt," he said. Magistrate J. A. Cox, in sentencing the doctors, said "this is a pitiful situation when three men of the medical profession whose personal and professional ethics are supposed to be so high, would deliberately scheme to defraud."

Secrecy Marks Ike's Talks With Cabinet

ABOARD U.S.S. HELENA, Dec. 9 (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower discussed Korean war policy with key cabinet members today in an atmosphere of secrecy rivaling that which surrounded his trip to the battle zone.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000-ton cruiser and the men who have been designated cabinet members shunned questions.

NO PRE-CHRISTMAS OLD-AGE PENSION CHEQUES FOR MALES

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (CP)—There will be no pre-Christmas cheques for the 700,000 Canadians who get old age security pensions.

Dr. E. A. McCusker, parliamentary assistant to Health Minister Martin, in the Commons today turned down a request by Ellen Fairclough (P.C.-Hamilton West) that they be sent out in time for Christmas. They normally are sent out during the last few days of each month.

No black mark on my record, sez th' civic candidate. But he'd sure like y' t' make one in th' square opp'site his name.

Things'd be better with them rioters if they had a little Morocco an' a little less loco.

Hear Ike may try t' get th' talkin' horse fer his cabinet. Th' father o' his country needs a good mudder.

U.N. NOT INSTRUMENT FOR PEACE—VISHINSKY

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky sailed for home today with the comment that the "work of the United Nations General Assembly as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

Vishinsky made the comment to reporters as he boarded the French liner Liberte.

Although the work of the assembly "isn't finished yet," he said, "it shows that the General Assembly does not fulfill its duty for peace. The very fact that the assembly adopted a resolution which is not promoting peace shows that its work as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

He apparently referred to U.N. adoption of an Indian resolution for peace in Korea.

Boys' School Shelved in B.C. 'Economy' Drive

$1,000,000 Industrial School For Nanaimo Put 'In Abeyance'

Plans for a new $1,000,000 boys' industrial school at Brannan Lake, near Nanaimo, have been shelved indefinitely by the provincial government in an economy move, it was learned today.

Quebec Bus Wrecked in Strange Blast

LOUISEVILLE, Que., Dec. 9 (CP)—Provincial police headquarters in Montreal today dispatched 20 men to the little industrial town of Louiseville after a blast, believed to have been caused by dynamite, wrecked an unoccupied bus.

Provincial police on the scene who started an investigation of the unexplained explosion said tension was growing in Louiseville where 500 textile workers have been on strike since March 10.

The move is apparently the latest in the new government's all-out attempt to bring about a reduction in British Columbia's budget for the first time in years. The 1952-53 budget is $142,000,000.

The Brannan Lake industrial school was offered as a solution to overcrowding in the present institution at Port Coquitlam on the grounds of Essondale.

Law enforcement and welfare officials throughout the Lower Mainland are bitterly disappointed over the government's decision to scrap the new school which would have housed 150 boys.

The present industrial school was originally intended to accommodate 55 persons, but has been occupied by as many as 120. It is an old vacation building for mentally defective persons.

Lack of space, officials contend, has hampered treatment of boys. The young offenders cannot be kept in the school long enough to get the full benefit of the training program because space is needed for new commitments.

The proposed Brannan Lake school would have been completely modern and given every opportunity for a full vocational training program designed to straighten out the young men and give them a useful trade.

The Coast Guard said there was no immediate fear for the safety of the 37 men aboard the Calmar Steamship Corp. vessel, but an ominous weather forecast demanded full speed if making the attempt to pull the ship into deep water.

As the powerful commercial tug Salvage Chief of Astoria, Ore., edged in toward the Liberty ship, the Weather Bureau forecast that it would soon be fighting winds up to 40 miles per hour.

Shortly after daybreak, the Salvage Chief began edging into position to try to get a line aboard.

An air force helicopter piloted by Flt. Lt. Dan Campbell spotted the wreckage between Sechart and Honeyman Bay, 40 miles northwest of Vancouver, Monday, but bad weather prevented him from landing. Campbell came down to within 100 feet of the wreckage, however, and reported he was certain it was the missing Anson. He saw no sign of life.

A R.C.M.P. search party was turned back by bad weather Monday night when it tried to reach the scene. This morning, a second party including an R.C.M.P. constable, Q.C.A. and Department of Transport officials reached the scene over a logging trail passing within 300 yards of the wreckage.

The party was expected to make its way back within a few hours to report on the identity of the plane and the fate of Capt. Wilson.

On the eve of the holiday there was a banquet for 2,000 in the hall of the Winter Palace where the meetings were taking place. Mao-Tse-tung presided at the head table and proposed innumerable toasts himself. Around him were his intimates and the guests of honor, mostly accredited diplomats from the people's democracies.

ONE WOMAN'S DAY

By NANCY HODGES

ODDITIES AND OTHERWISE

WHEN YOU READ as many newspapers as I do you become conscious of the queer people and the queer happenings that lend spice to the news of the world. I get many a chuckle out of the little items that hide themselves in the comparative obscurity of the back pages of the larger metropolitan dailies.

For instance, the way in which officialdom can strangle itself in red tape is one of those queer quirks that puzzle the ordinary individual. And the odd thing about it is that such silliness isn't confined to any one particular country, by any means.

CUTTING FOR CABBAGES

AS AN EXAMPLE of the way in which officialdom can strangle itself in red tape, the particular department of the British government to fix the price of cabbages. You wouldn't think it would require much verbiage to tell farmers and barrowmen and greengrocers how much to charge for the lowly but popular vegetable.

But it must have been a much harder job than a mere layman supposes, for, by the time that order was written it contained no less than 26,911 words—enough to make any farmer or tradesman scratch his own head in despair and feel like throwing all the cabbages at the cabbage heads in officialdom. It's all the more astonishing when you recall that the Ten Commandments only required 297 words to frame them.

ISN'T BORN YET

TAKE THE CASE of 10-year-old John Morris, of London, England. He was born in Singapore during the Japanese occupation in 1942, and a Japanese official made his birth certificate out as of June 3, 2602.

His mother appealed to the records office at Somerset House, London, for a correction. But she was told by the authorities there that they consider a birth certificate final and unalterable. And she hasn't yet been able to convince them that their official view that her husky youngster won't be born for another 660 years takes a bit of swallowing!

HAD TO BE BORN AGAIN

THAT SOMERSET HOUSE attitude reminds me of the story—which is perfectly true—of the now deceased editor of one of the most famous small-town newspapers in the United States. He prided himself upon the accuracy of his news columns to such an extent that he would never admit a mistake.

On one occasion an irate subscriber protested about the report that had been printed about his supposed death. Not even his living presence demanding a retraction would stir that editor. The only concession he would make was that, in order to be restored to life as far as his newspaper was concerned, the complainant could publish a birth notice in the next day's paper!

CONFUSED VOTERS

IT ISN'T THE first time I have heard of voters being confused about an issue, but for sheer incomprehensibility the results of a recent referendum in Waldwick, N.J., probably established a record. The voters in that U.S. borough voted by 1,078 to 808 in favor of establishing a full-time system of police protection. At the same time they voted against spending the additional $10,000 yearly it would cost them. Then they finally voted 956 to 905 in favor of retaining the present part-time system. Who wouldn't be a City Father?

That Waldwick incident reminded me of the Irish meeting called to discuss the building of a new church. It was decided to build the new edifice out of the material salvaged from the old, but definite instructions were given that the old church was not to be torn down until the new one was ready for occupation.

B.C. Telephone Warned Public Patience Thin

Councillor G. Stanley Eden, not satisfactory," said the councillor.

If this policy continues, he warned, many who are now against socializing utility companies will start believing "that the only remedy is public ownership."

The councillor sharply criticized the telephone company when the council was informed by a Board of Transport Commissioners' letter that the company had been granted interim rate increases for long distance calls.

The higher rates are expected to affect Colquitz and other exchanges in the municipality.

Describing the telephone service in parts of Saanich as "poor," Mr. Eden said it was "bad business" for a company to raise its rates before doing something to improve its services.

"They have admitted that the telephone service in Saanich is

DRIVER INJURED ON ICY MALAHAT

Collision North of Summit Blamed on Freezing Surface; Woman Hurt in City

First hard freeze on the Malahat claimed one victim Monday when the car collided with a logging truck.

J. McAlpine, Bamberton, was reported in good condition at Jubilee Hospital today.

R.C.M.P. reported that the car he was driving was in collision with a logging truck owned by E. B. Chado, driven by Doug Richards, late in the afternoon just north of the Malahat summit. Accident was due to the ice-covered condition of the highway, police said.

McAlpine suffered a crushed foot and a lacerated arm and was taken to hospital by passing motorist, L. J. Traeger. Damage to the car was heavy.

Mrs. Ada Cook, 56, of 828 Island Highway, was treated at Jubilee Hospital at 5:10 p.m. for an injured right knee and a bump on the forehead.

Police said she was a passenger in a car driven by Harry G. Cook, in collision with a car driven by John C. Martin, 1230 Chapman, at Linden and Oscar.

Damage was done to cars driven by Bernard Milnes, 875 Dunsmuir, and Earl McDougall, 1060 Pandora, when they met in collision at Yates and Government at 4:35 p.m., police report.

Cars also were damaged in a collision in the 600 block of Linden at 8:10 p.m. Driven by Gwen Cash, 1636 Rockland, and Leon F. French, 533 Harbinger. Their damage was slight.

1952 Budget For Esquimalt Levelled Up

Esquimalt councillor W. H. Dalway told Monday night's council meeting that when the Social Security and Municipal Aid grant was received this month it would more than cover the outstanding expenses for the past year.

The disclosure came after the reading of a letter from the auditors for the municipality asking that a by-law be passed to cover revisions to the 1952 estimates.

The changes were made necessary because some departments were overspent and others had not used up their budgeted allotment. Total expenses for the year were within the estimated total.

Other business disposed of included the approval for sale of a lot at Esquimalt and Grafton Street. The buyers, Yarrows Ltd., will provide an employees' parking area there.

The annual New Year's Day reception at the municipal hall was placed for planning in the hands of Councillors W. H. Dalway, J. Bryant and W. Holder. Clr. G. R. Guillemaud, who is ill in hospital, is not expected to be in attendance at council meetings until after the New Year's holiday.

Hearings Open in U.S. On St. Lawrence Project

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (AP)—The federal power commission opened hearings today on the New York state power authority's application to join Canada in constructing an estimated $450,000,000 power project on the St. Lawrence River.

A total of 39 parties have asked and been granted F.P.C. permission to intervene. Some support the authority's application for a license while other oppose it.

The authority seeks permission to join the province of Ontario in the hydro-electric project, which is calculated to develop 12,600,000,000 kilowatt hours of energy a year.

It would be built on the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence between Massena, N.Y., and Cornwall, Ont. John E. Burton, chairman of the power authority of New York, told reporters an annual saving of $95,000,000 to New York users of electricity will result if the state is permitted to construct power developments on the St. Lawrence and Niagara Rivers.

Burton said he would so testify at the hearing. He was scheduled as the first witness. The hearing probably will require three days. The Niagara proposal is not before the commission in the present case. It is, however, a part of the authority's long-range program.

JUST LUCK THAT I LIVED

Lone Officer to Survive Titanic Sinking Dead

TWICKENHAM, Eng., Dec. 9 (Reuters)—Cmdr. Charles Herbert Lightoller has died here at the age of 78, still haunted by the memory of one of the greatest tragedies of the sea.

For Cmdr. Lightoller was the only officer to survive the sinking of the Titanic.

The "unsinkable" Titanic hit an iceberg off Newfoundland just before midnight April 14, 1912, and went down with a loss of over 1,500 lives.

Lightoller was second officer of the liner at the time of the disaster. He retired with his rank of commander in 1923.

RETURNED TO SEA

But he came back to the sea briefly during the Second World War. With his 60-foot launch he evacuated 130 men from the beaches at Dunkerque under constant enemy bombing and strafing.

With close friends he would talk over his last hours aboard the Titanic. "It was just luck that I lived through," he would say.

Lightoller was in his bunk on the bitter cold night when the Titanic struck. When he felt the shuddering jar as the ice ripped through the luxury liner's plates he ran on deck but could see nothing, hear nothing.

Describing it later, he said there was little panic. No one had to be fought back from the boats, except a crowd of central European emigrants who rushed up terror-stricken from the steerage. An officer fired a pistol over their heads and they calmed down.

The band, which had been playing dance music in the main ballroom of the 46,329-ton ship, eventually came up on deck and played "Nearer, My God, to Thee," while men and women in evening dress stood by and sang the words of the hymn.

Lightoller was busy getting the boats away and found they could hold less than half the 2,200 people aboard.

When the ship began to plunge he leaped off a deckhouse into the icy water below, filled with struggling men and women. A wave sent up by the crash of one of the liner's smoke stacks washed him clear of the suction vortex of the sinking ship.

He clambered on an overturned, waterlogged boat and hung on grimly until the Ss. Carpathia, summoned by the frantic S.O.S. flashes of the radio-man who stayed at his transmitter, arrived and picked up the survivors.

Of the 2,200 persons who sailed on the Titanic, only 711 survived the sinking.

The Murder of a Beautiful Theory

By a Gang of Brutal Facts

is one of the greatest tragedies of Canadian life . . . but those who would organize facts to murder theories should first get their facts straight and then present them accordingly.

Now, Know the REAL Facts About Buying Meats for Freezer Storage

FROM HOME PROVISIONERS, the organization of food distributors who introduced into Canada, the amazing bulk-quantity food buying plan that has been copied in part by appliance dealers, roofing and siding door-to-door sales crews, used car dealers, raw fur dealers and everyone else who has recognized the universal desire to save money on food costs. If you would know the facts about bulk-quantity food purchasing and the tremendous savings effected by this revolutionary method of cutting living costs without reducing living standards, get these facts from the organization who created them . . . Home Provisioners with food processing and distributing plants in Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Vancouver, Victoria, Kitchener, Hamilton, Toronto!

FACT: Home Provisioners never has and never will refer to the prices at which they deliver food to their customers as "wholesale prices"! The price Home Provisioners' customers pay for some items may be less than their grocer pays for the similar item they sell at retail, but the fact remains that "wholesale prices" are those prices at which goods are sold for resale and not prices at which any article is sold to an individual for consumption or use. Home Provisioners delivers food to its customers at "bulk-quantity" prices!

FACT: Home Provisioners does not attempt to "mislead" the Canadian homemaker in spite of the implications made by some advertisers. Home Provisioners DOES attempt to enlighten them to the terrific savings made possible by their original program of bulk-quantity food merchandising.

FACT: Home Provisioners cannot, nor can they be expected to assume responsibility for statements made in advertising or sales literature by companies other than their own, nor can they exercise control over the policies of other organizations who undertake to enter the food distributing field with or without adequate food buying, processing, and distributing experience.

FACT: Home Provisioners does not sell beef or pork or poultry or fish at live weights. Home Provisioners' prices on these items are net weight prices after the normal shrinkage resulting from custom processing for home use has been absorbed by the company. When you buy so many pounds of beef from Home Provisioners, Home Provisioners delivers that EXACT number of pounds of beef to your home in spite of the claims made by those who would make you believe you are being "misled."

FACT: The fantastic meat shrinkage figures quoted in recent advertisements do not take into consideration the effects of Government regulations governing the trimming of beef sold by packing houses. Almost half of this waste must be trimmed off the carcass before the packing house can sell the beef to processors. Home Provisioners absorbs the balance of this waste themselves on the meats they deliver and their prices are quoted accordingly.

FACT: It is not necessary to buy a side or even a quarter of beef from Home Provisioners to benefit from their amazingly low beef prices. London Conference Disperses All Ideas Of Restrictive Trade Says Minister

By NORMAN M. MACLEOD

British United Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Canadian Finance Minister Douglas Abbott today described the Commonwealth Economic Conference as "easily the most satisfactory meeting of its kind that I have ever attended."

To news correspondents who asked him to elaborate his reasons for his viewpoint, he said that the present conference has witnessed the final disappearance of any surviving opinion that restrictive trade policies could achieve salvation for the economy of any nation.

The recognition that final solution could come only through non-restrictive expansionist and development policies now was universal in Commonwealth councils, Abbott said.

Canada's finance minister addressed his optimistic, if also wholly general, comment on the conference to newsmen who met him today at Canada House just 36 hours before the gathering is expected to adjourn.

He said he could give no details of the conference's achievements; his work would be covered in a formal communiqué to be issued probably on Wednesday night.

But from informed sources the following features of the final communiqué can be forecast reliably:

(1) No mechanics of early convertibility will be suggested.

(2) But a broad scheme of Commonwealth economic development to bring about the increase in sterling area productivity upon which ultimate convertibility can be based will be approved.

The scheme of development will be carried out without the creation of any new Commonwealth board or agency and with funds furnished one-half from United Kingdom sources and one-half from outside sources, presumably the United States and the Commonwealth countries directly concerned.

Private investors will be invited to subscribe and individual Canadians and Canadian financial firms may be among these. The Canadian government will not contribute, since Canada is not part of the sterling area.

(3) The indispensability of United States co-operation in the Commonwealth plan of economic development will be recognized.

Provision will be made in the communiqué for the necessary approaches to Washington, with the likelihood that they will be undertaken by the United Kingdom government on behalf of the Commonwealth nations as a group.

(4) An enlarged economic conference at which representatives of both the United States and the other sterling area nations would attend is unlikely to be one of the immediate or even early results of the present meeting.

(5) The reference to gold which the communiqué will contain, while it is being held highly secret, is not expected to be sensational.

From the standpoint of the Canadian delegation, satisfaction in the foregoing program is substantial in philosophic and long-range terms.

It represents the triumph of the non-restrictive expansionist approach which Ottawa's policy makers have both advocated and practiced since the close of the Second World War.

CHICAGO BUS PASSENGERS WILL NEVER FORGET THIS

CHICAGO, Dec. 9 (AP)—W. E. Jackson, 30, a streetcar motorman for four months, got his chance to drive a bus Monday.

His tour of duty as a bus driver was hectic, speedy and brief.

He was in the Loop at the height of the evening rush. Traffic was snarled. Package-laden Christmas shoppers jam-packed his bus before he slammed the doors and took off for the 10-mile express trip to the southwest side.

He didn't make a single stop to take on or let off a passenger. He drove his howling passengers all the way to the bus barn, jumped from the bus and walked into the superintendent's office.

"I'm through," Jackson said as he threw his identification badge onto a desk. "I spent 10 years in the army but I can't take this."

A police officer was summoned to take some of the angry passengers to their proper destination.

A spokesman for the Chicago transit authority said Jackson had quit.

"He can't do that," the spokesman said. "We'll fire him."

Newfoundland Real Estate Deal Said Biggest of Century

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 9 (BUP)—Premier Joseph Smallwood said today the biggest real estate deal since the dawn of the 20th century has been concluded by Newfoundland to tap the untold wealth hidden in Canada's 10th province and the bleak Labrador tundra.

He said a syndicate of wealthy Britons had agreed to undertake a tremendous program of exploration utilizing British technical know-how and an early start was promised.

Smallwood said a preliminary agreement finalized "the biggest real estate deal the North American continent has seen in this century," and predicted it would reap "rich rewards" both for the province and the United Kingdom.

The British syndicate includes bankers, financiers and industrialists, and is headed by the internationally famous banking house of Rothschild. It is composed of 20 companies, of whom two, Bowaters and the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Co.

Ltd., already have huge paper mills in Newfoundland. Under initial terms of the project, huge expanses in both Newfoundland and Labrador will be turned over to the British group for the purpose of seeking out natural resources.

The first survey parties will move into the field immediately following the spring break-up.

Smallwood said mineral wealth would be the primary object of the search.

Ghandi's Son Arrested in S.A.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 9 (AP)—White South Africans, including the son of a former governor-general, for the first time have joined in the native-led campaign of defiance against Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan's white supremacy and racial segregation laws.

Seven whites were arrested Monday for entering a nearby Negro settlement without permits and holding a meeting. Police also jailed 18 Indians—including a son of the late Mohandas K. Gandhi—and 14 Negroes who joined in the meeting.

The group of protesting whites was led by Patrick Duncan, son of a former governor-general, who walked on crutches into the rector, Sir Patrick Ashley Cooper, watched as the group entered the settlement, where Duncan addressed a crowd of about 1,000. The police arrested Duncan, Gandhi and the others as they started to leave the settlement.

All were to appear in court today. They face maximum penalties of £300 fines or three years in jail.

Conservatives Write a Letter

ON THIS PAGE LAST SATURDAY appeared a letter from a group of prominent Victoria Conservatives vigorously, but in good temper, attacking us for misrepresenting the affairs of their party. It was an excellent letter, and welcome. The writers—business and professional men—are the sort who need in politics and the only sort who can revive the Conservative party, if anyone can. Their attempt at revival merits the highest praise. And we hope they succeed.

In the first place, they deny our statement that all the established politicians of the party were pressed to accept its leadership and refused. They will not deny, however, that Mr. Davie Fulton, M.P.; General Pearkes, V.C., M.P.; Mr. Howard Green, M.P., and Mr. Anson all were pressed to accept the leadership. If there are any other established Conservative leaders in British Columbia their names escape us.

The letter goes on to say that if the Conservative party is in a bad way, provincially speaking, so is the Liberal party. This tu quoque argument is familiar and does not in any way disprove what was said here about the Conservative party. It is in a very bad way as the writers undoubtedly know and do not deny.

They are quite right, however, in saying that the Liberal party in provincial affairs is also at a low ebb. They seem to think this is news to us. If they will refer to these columns after the last election they will see the state of the Liberal party so described. It was said then and is still true that the Liberal party, like the Conservative party, is now engaged in a fight for survival as a large force in provincial affairs.

The danger in our politics today is the polarization of parties between the extreme right of Social Credit and the extreme left of socialism. The Liberal party, we believe, has an opportunity to re-build itself, after the elimination of undesirable elements, into a broad middle party which can compromise the clash of these extremes, but the task will not be easy and is likely to be long.

The natural place of the Conservation is in such a situation is much more difficult to see since, apart from the lunatic fringe) the Social Credit party appears to be only a Conservative reincarnation, leaving little room for the original version. However, the writers of the letter to The Times, and others like them, will have their chance to disprove that assumption.

The letter then goes on, somewhat irrelevantly, to attack the Liberal party in federal affairs and to support Mr. Drew. There is space here only to ask the writers whether they favor the Conservative tariff policy, Mr. Drew's costly plan for old age pensions at 65 (which means a large tax increase) and his gesture towards health insurance (which means the same thing). There are other aspects of Mr. Drew's policies which will be discussed here later.

Then the letter, still more irrelevantly, attacks Mr. Gardiner, apparently for his farm policies. Have the writers forgotten that the Conservative party in Parliament has never dared to attack Mr. Gardiner's high meat prices, his wheat deals or his attempt to suppress margarine? It is easy to attack Mr. Gardiner but unless, unless the Conservatives are prepared to attack his policies.

The letter concludes with a very sensible plea for a better management of industrial problems, for greater sanity among owners and labor unions and for a secret strike ballot. It would seem from these and other passages in the letter that the writers are attempting to persuade their party to return to a traditional Conservative position. It is not necessary to agree with that position to see that it offers the party its only hope in federal and provincial affairs alike.

The Conservative party throughout the nation has declined for years mainly because it possessed no clear policy and offered no clear alternative to the Liberal government. That is still its position. If it can recruit more young men like the writers of this letter it may recover its old power of convincing the public that it does stand for something. At all events, some of its followers here wish it to stand for something and they deserve encouragement, especially when their motives are so clearly unselfish.

They Forget the Human Factor

THE BASIC PRINCIPLE OF "TO each according to his need, from each according to his ability" was one of the economic reforms promised by the Russian revolution. Even as a theory the idea has many objectionable features. It was just as well, for Russia, that it was junked by Stalin along with most of the other Marx-Lenin doctrines.

But what has taken its place under Stalin's brand of communism appears equally unacceptable in practice. The rigid state control of prices, wages and output, the set production goals, the shock workers and the regimentation have not been able to take the place of personal incentive and the profit motive in producing goods efficiently for the consumer.

Thus we hear periodically of purges in Russian industry, of increased exhortations to reach or exceed some fixed quota required by the state, of imbalance between capital and consumer goods, and other maladjustments of a fettered economic system.

Latest evidence, from no less a source than the Soviet newspaper Izvestia, reveals another shortcoming. The journal estimates a direct loss of 3 billion rubles—which at the Russian valuation represents $750 millions—to the government as the result of "spoiled and substandard" goods.

The producers of these goods were operating directly under the Soviet government—a hazardous enough position at the best of times—and they have been warned, along with the heads of other enterprises, to effect "a serious improvement in the quality of output." It is unlikely, however, that threat of punishment can long take the place of human incentive. Russian economics, despite the great Soviet production effort, will remain "spoiled and substandard."

Surveying the Lakelands

LANDS AND FORESTS MINISTER Robert Sommers has been frank in his assessment of plans for logging in the Tweedsmuir Park region. He has been equally realistic in weighing the significance of Alcan's offer to underwrite commercial operators working that area.

The company's arrangement goes part way toward meeting the objection of British Columbians to the drowning of trees in the park. But, in Mr. Sommers' words, this is a "minor step to the solution."

The Alcan proposal does, of course, merit applause as a start on a problem intensified by the time element of rising waters. It still leaves the government with a big question to settle. Engineers are now in the field determining prospects and costs of removing all the forest growth that would be inundated by the rising waters of the different lakes—a project favored by residents of that part of British Columbia in their pleas for the preservation of scenic beauties.

On the basis of earlier unofficial reports, such an undertaking would be costly. At the same time, those acquainted with the lakeland of Tweedsmuir argue that its beauty is priceless. The minister is doubtless well informed on these points. He has shown commendable initiative in seeking detailed information to determine the feasibility of preserving an attraction which, unspoiled, could ultimately justify on economic grounds the present price of its preservation. As industrial progress continues to invade and push back the wilderness, the recreational value of such country will increase.

Conversation Piece

IN HIS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION, Ald. Robert Macmillan has revived his advocacy of a Dallas Road recreation project. He says he wants to spend money on it.

The Macmillan plan announced previously is specific in its recommendations. In broad terms, however, it could be integrated into a general Dallas Road improvement scheme—an undertaking endorsed along different lines by both Mayor Harrison and city parks administrator W. H. Warren.

Early in March of this year the mayor and the parks administrator outlined suggestions for the waterfront in that locality. Mr. Warren, as he had done in recent years, sought funds for the work in his parks estimates. And, as it has done in recent years, the council refused them. Mayor Harrison advanced the idea that private interests might be encouraged to undertake some improvement, specializing in the planting of native trees, shrubs and wildflowers.

The proposals at that time furnished interesting topics for conversation. They still do. They will continue in that role indefinitely unless some funds are spent on actual work. So far the city has been content to restrict its activity on the improvement to words—which leave the Dallas Road waterfront just as it is.

LOOSE ENDS

The Joke

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

MR. JACK SCOTT, the penetrating columnist of The Vancouver Sun, has been compelled to defend the honor of his craft. He had been accused by one of his readers of writing "light pieces" and mere whimsy at a time when the "world is on the brink of final suicide" in the face of which columnists persist in making "your little jokes."

Mr. Scott says that light writers like himself are aware of the world's present state.

But the easiest thing is that it would be far easier to write steadily on the untidy state of the globe. The columnist is asked to whistle passing the graveyard.

HARD WORK
This, in a local version, is the answer given by G. K. Chesterton, the greatest columnist of all time, to a similar question. Among those other sparkling exhibits of wisdom which Chesterton supplied abundantly under the guise of jokes, is an immortal statement concerning the joke.

If, he asks, anyone were told that he must invent a single joke before night-fall or write half a dozen leading editorials for The London Times, which alternative would he choose? Obviously he would choose the latter. Anyone can write serious editorials, the more serious the easier they are, but to invent a joke requires the highest form of genius.

Very few men are capable of it. Read the speeches of our ablest statesmen and you will find mountains of wisdom, rich in the ore of learning, but hardly a single nugget of humor. Thus, says Chesterton, he usually has to content himself with the low level of The Times and very rarely soars up to the level of Tit-Bits and its jokes.

In a technical sense, as I have been told by practitioners of this art, humor is a very difficult thing. I know nothing about that but am willing to take the word of professionals like Chesterton and Scott, who have made their fortunes the hard way. The rest of us must content ourselves with advising the public how to save the world, which is easy.

Anyone can save the world in print. A child of twelve can save it several times a day. A congenial idiot, if he owns a typewriter, can tell the government precisely how to run the country. Only a genius can make the country laugh at itself but, alas, there are not many geniuses among the swarming hordes of world-savers. We should be thankful for the softest whistle beside the cemetery.

THE CURE
This is much more than a technical problem. In refusing to cure the world while laughing at it, the humorist in fact is unconsciously prescribing the only possible cure. I do not say that a civilization as sick as ours can be cured by a joke, but I suspect that it cannot be cured without a joke or at least without a sense of humor. Without a sense of humor the thing is intolerable. If we regarded it only through the eyes of the statesman and the editorial writer we would all go crazy under the strain of reality.

What is reality in our current dilemma? To this generation reality is pretty grim but to a neutral observer, say a citizen of Mars, reality on the earth is probably a joke indescribably humorous. The newspapers of Mars, no doubt, if they have reliable foreign correspondents, must be filled with riotously funny dispatches from the earth.

NO JOKES, PLEASE

The public of the earth understands these things subconsciously. It sees the joke in a vague way but refuses to admit it. The intelligent man feels bound to read the editorials and not the jokes. Indeed, he resents it bitterly when the better sort of statesman sometimes soars, like Chesterton, up to the level of Tit-Bits.

The joke is considered a fatal mistake among the professional practitioners of politics, especially in Canada. No statesman can afford to be funny and his attempts to be always serious are the funniest spectacle of the day. As in the case of the columnist like Mr. Scott, it is so easy to fill the pages of Hansard with dull wisdom which no one will read, so hard to say anything bright, to emit an occasional whistle.

The statesman who dared to be consciously funny would fill a great national need, he would probably be the most useful of our public servants, but he would doom himself forever to the back benches of Parliament. The public would never trust him to cabinet office though he would be perfectly qualified for it because he would prove himself not only clever but wise.

Like the man from Mars he would see the universal slapstick comedy of our time, performed by all the solemn clowns of statecraft, he would appreciate the work of such magnificent comedians as Volotov, Vishinsky and Malenkov, and he might know how to deal with them.

We cannot understand that sort of comedy at the moment because we have been selected as the butt of the great joke. We are the foil of the comedian; the absurd little man who falls on his face or receives a custard pie squarely in the middle of it. When someone like Chesterton or Scott comes along to tell us how funny we look we should be grateful for even a moment's escape from the statesman and editorial writers, those other unconscious comedians.

MARKED for READING
PROPER PART
The saving of ends of burnt candles is a very proper part of the duties of a Chancellor of the Exchequer.

—William Ewart Gladstone.

RESPECT
To defend freedom is—first of all—to respect freedom. That respect demands another, quite simple kind of respect—respect for the integrity of fellow citizens who enjoy their right to disagree. The right to question or challenge a man's judgment carries with it no automatic right to question his honor.

—Dwight Eisenhower.

That Chimney Needs Straightening Out

As Our Readers See It

DEFEND THE PARKS
Victoria city council would like it to appear that the Christmas spirit of giving has already permeated their bones, when they generously offer four acres of adjoining land to replace the present three-and-one-half acre Pemberton Park.

Why taint the gift with the Scroogey spirit of taking away, when the vacant land could easily be added to the present park?

Citizens of Victoria, our existing parks are sound assets and daily grow more valuable! Deny them to the ballot box!

DENIS H. BESLEY,
234 Government Street.

PROFIT SHARING
The announcement by a local shipyard official that management is studying "the principle of profit sharing" has caused great interest and some hilarity among Victoria shipyard workers.

For some years past, union representatives have met management annually to discuss that simplest of all profit sharing schemes, a wage increase.

Like most other schemes advanced by employees, it meets with a cool reception, particularly so this year, in spite of a conciliatory board's decision that we deserve a 12½ cent an hour wage increase as our share of the profits.

Management's latest decision to discuss profit sharing with their employees would seem to be a tacit admission that the workers deserve a piece of pie, although it contrasts very sharply with their recent statements that high labor costs are writing "finis" to the B.C. shipbuilding industry.

F. J. BEVIS,
President Victoria Joint Shipyard Council.

SOMETHING NEW?
Some letters in this column have objected to the Social Credit adherence to Christian principles.

Regardless of Christianity, these principles are respected by good men and bad, when sincerely practised and they should form the basic plank in all political platforms. Unfortunately politicians have always acted upon the principle that the end justifies the means, which accounts for the cynicism and hypocrisy reflected in our present system and for the fact that few people trust the average professional candidate for office, especially those at the top of the tree.

Personally, I like the sober, business-like statements made by the Social Credit party and hope that they never deviate from their regard for Christian principles in political life. It is something entirely new in Canadian political circles, and from observation over many years the old parties have very little interest in Christian ethics.

A. L. M.
Sidney, B.C.

CHURCH COLLECTIONS
Is the solicited pledge system of donating a specified sum of money annually or monthly to some churches a reasonable and generally acceptable plan?

While it is true that some churches desire to know in advance what subscriptions or monies are being pledged by members of their congregations to meet general expenses, does it not lead to discriminating tendencies? Some church wardens, having access to such financial records, are in a position to know or talk too much, and become somewhat prejudiced against, or feel superior to, those who can ill-afford to measure up financially to the more substantial pledges.

The church money pledge should perhaps be abolished entirely. The voluntary weekly collection system (open plate or sealed envelope) is much less embarrassing, and removes the inevitable discriminating tendencies.

J. R. WILSON,
739 Yates St.

This Hits All of Us
Toronto Globe and Mail

As Mr. Abbott has rightly stated, the present rate of corporation tax endangers "the economy as a whole." It jeopardizes the prosperity and security of farmers, wage-earners, employers, shareholders, all of us. It jeopardizes the Dominion Government itself, for that government's whole tax structure (including corporation tax) is predicated on a high level of economic activity—a level which cannot be long maintained when income tax is taking 52% of corporation profits in nine provinces, and 54% in the tenth.

There is no mystery about it. When we soak the corporations, we soak ourselves. Tomorrow's job, tomorrow's security, tomorrow's taxes can only come from the expansion and modernization of our productive plant; our factories, mines, mills and all the rest. But it takes money to modernize and expand. Where is that money to come from? There is only one proper place to get it, and that is from corporation profits, retained or distributed. But more than half those profits are being drained off by income tax. This year, the corporations will pay the federal government at least $14 billion—the hypothetical equivalent of 100,000 new jobs, new taxpayers, new customers for Saskatchewan's oil and beef and butter. As Mr. Abbott admits, it is too much; it cannot go on.

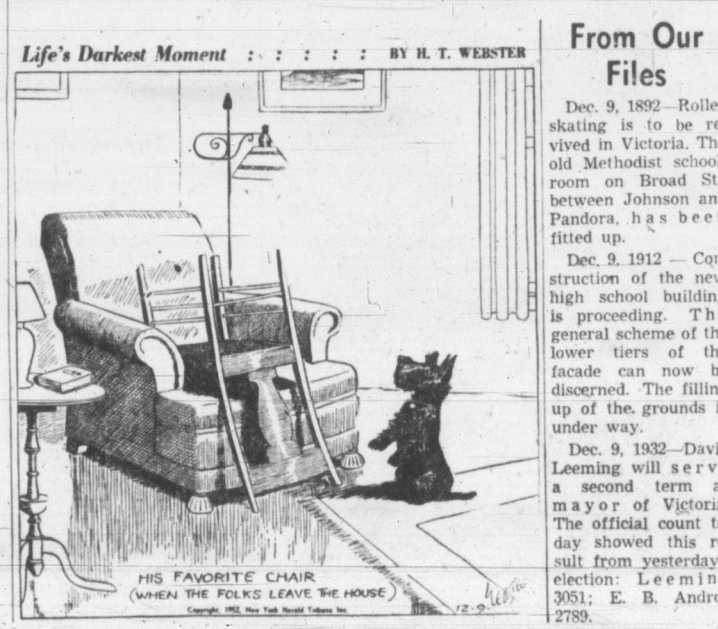

Which party will win power in next year's election, we do not pretend to know. But no matter what happens, the finance minister's warning holds good. The government which takes office in 1933 must either reduce corporation taxes, or else see Canada's whole economy slide downhill.

The House Needs a Roof

By JOSEPH ALSOP

from Bonn, Germany

THE Schaumburg Palais, from which wise old Conrad Adenauer rules this country, can serve as a pretty good symbol of what has happened in Western Germany since the end of the war.

Like most of Germany, the once proud and pretentious Bonn residence of the Princes of Schaumburg-Lippe was very far from improved by the war. None the less, it was about the best that Bonn had to offer, when the new West German government was established.

To serve Adenauer as the equivalent of the Joseph White House, the battered old place was first hastily patched up; then entirely refitted in the rather bleak, efficient modified North-German Lloyd style that so many Germans like nowadays.

And in its new guise, with its fresh white paint, its stately tidy gardens, and its air of incipient prosperity, the Schaumburg Palais seems to proclaim, firmly and even with a certain smugness, Germany's power to build a new life out of the ruins.

Here reigns—for the present at least, reign is nearest one can come to the right word—Conrad Adenauer, one of the truly remarkable men of the west. Aged but indomitable, the leader of the Christian Democrats, the Chancellor of West Germany, offers his visitors an impenetrable facade of irreconcilable contradictions.

He is so provincial that he hates to be more than 50 miles from his native Cologne. Yet no one better understands men, nations and the world. He is notoriously witty. Yet when he says he will do something, he invariably meets his contract. He is profoundly cynical. Yet he has worked and is working towards a bold ideal of a democratic Germany incorporated in a United Europe.

At this moment, Adenauer towers over the German scene. An accumulation of fearful illnesses and wounds has at last removed his great adversary, the brave, tortured and terrible Dr. Schumacher.

MANY CAUSES

At this moment, moreover, Adenauer can look around him and see many causes for satisfaction. The Bonn government, the experiment that once seemed so frail and almost hopeless, has at last become the true government of Western Germany, with an authority recognized by the whole German people.

Simultaneously, West Germany has achieved an extraordinary recovery. Factories and houses are everywhere replacing rubble and ruins. Jobs are opening for the great mass of postwar refugees and unemployed. Hard work and bold enterprises are making Germany a decent place to live again.

But Conrad Adenauer is one German who will always tell you: "It is foolish to talk only about Germany. You cannot discuss Germany nowadays without talking too about France and Italy and the other nations which compose the Europe of the future, and about this Europe's relation to the West." And in this matter of "building Europe," Adenauer can also point to progress.

The Schuman plan has passed—and has been put in operation. At Luxembourg Jean Monnet and his team of Germans, Italians, Belgians and Netherlands are even now preparing to open a single, united, European market for coal and steel, and to give Europe a coal and steel industry worthy of a market of 150,000,000 people. Earnestly working with the other nations' representatives, Adenauer's ex-trades-unionist defense minister, and his two quiet-spoken, singularly lucid-minded generals, Speidel and Heusinger, have all but completed practical, detailed planning for a European army.

But the European army, although passed here, can be defeated in Paris, and this defeat will soon bring down the whole structure of European unity and Western defense.

"The floor is in, the walls are up," said Adenauer the other day, in his quiet, dry manner. "But if the roof is not carefully and quickly put on, the hard weather of our times will soon destroy everything that has been built up in these last troubled years." It seemed a good message to an America busily re-examining this effort in which Adenauer has loomed so large.

Ups and Downs

By BRIAN TOBIN

"IT ISN'T always," said the Elevator Man, "the greatest admirers who have the greatest admiration. Many a voice that utters loud praise is backed by a mind thinking something else. It's hard, for instance, for a humorist to be sure the laughter is for him the highest form of praise or at him—a much different thing. Take the other day, for example, when A. P. Herbert, the English M.P. and humorist, hired a new cook."

The lady expressed a great admiration for his writings and added to his pleasure by cooking a good meal. But a couple of hours later she had walked off with $300 worth of silver, and that was no silvery laugh. It all depends, I guess, on whether admiration is a gift to the admired one, or merely a down payment on something he's going to have to deliver later. Lower main!

"The London writer," said the Elevator Man, "could easily have been the original victim of that story about Bridget. A husband, coming home in the evening, said to his wife: 'From the glimpse I had of her this morning, I rather like our new cook. There seems to be plenty of go about her.' 'Yes,' said the wife. 'She's gone.' Mezzanine!

"When it comes to flattery," said the Elevator Man, "actions can be much more emphatic than words. And also when it comes to the opposite. That's why there's such a life-like twist to that story about the fella whose friends said, 'I understand your wife is a finished singer.' 'Well, not quite,' says the fella. 'But one of the neighbors nearly got her last night!'"

Hot Words as Candidates Make Last Appeals

By AILEEN CAMPBELL
Wind-up rally in the current civic election campaign in Britannia Branch of the Legion

Monday night, saw 13 candidates in their best form to date.

In a precision-run meeting, they came as close to "fighting speeches" as the campaign has heard, and during a question period gave as good as they got on Prince Robert House, parking meter funds, police promotions and working mothers.

Spectator Phillip Freedman, unsuccessful candidate of last year, whose wife is seeking election to council this year, donned hat and coat and made an angry exit after being threatened with eviction.

Spectator Joe North, at the rear of the hall, provided a permanent rumble of "I want to ask a question" throughout the written question period.

Chairman Ronald Jeune ran excellent interference between the 13 candidates and audience of about 100. Candidates were kept to a five-minute deadline and the meeting, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, broke up neatly at 10.15.

During the question period, ex-Ald. Millard Mooney, running for council again, was asked about condemnation of Prince Robert House by the building inspector.

NEVER CONDEMNED

"That is an untrue statement... the building inspector never condemned it," replied Mr. Mooney.

Up shot Mr. Freedman: "Mr. Mooney, you're lying. I want the truth, the truth..."

"I will have to ask you to be escorted from the meeting" interjected Chairman Jeune.

"I am not leaving by myself. I am ashamed to sit here," said Mr. Freedman.

Ald. Arthur Dowell, seeking re-election, charged Mayor Harrison's veto on sale of Prince Robert House cost the city $850,000, that the original offer was $40,000 net "and that's what the city got."

Ex-police chief John McLellan, candidate for police commissioner, claimed the city is violating its own by-law by not earmarking parking meter revenue for solution to the parking problem.

LAUGHS AT NEIGHBORS

Aldermanic candidate Harry Haigh amused the audience with a little story of his neighbors up Rockland Avenue way and of how he came to purchase city-owned property in this residential section.

"Robert Ker lived behind me, Pat Sinnott beside me and Russell Ker just down the street. I thought this is going to be a very interesting place. Somebody advised me: 'Don't get too close to the Ker family—it has a lot of power and can break you.'"

"It has been very interesting... they'd like to throw me out but don't know how."

Ald. Robert Macmillan, seeking re-election, told the audience he had fulfilled his promises of last February, including reduction of council and inauguration of night meetings.

School Trustee Austin Curtis, seeking re-election, declared the Pemberton Woods subdivision, by-law raised by another school board candidate was "completely outside the scope of the board."

School board candidate Harold Whitfield told of seeing children going to school at five minutes after eight in the morning, although school does not start until nine.

"Mothers and fathers both go to work and the children stay at school until 4.30. Who's looking after them? More and more responsibility is being placed on the school."

Asked why he did not "seem to want to give the mayor credit for getting an extra $50,000 for the grain elevator and $1,000 for Prince Robert House," Ald. Dowell replied:

"I don't mind giving him credit, but to be candid, I don't think the mayor is entitled to it. The whole council turned down the $150,000 offer on the grain elevator."

Queried on police promotions, Mr. McLellan advocated: "All things being equal, the senior man should get the preference."

Gordon Carter, police commission candidate, favored the existing system of examination, which he said was the only "fair way."

Mr. Haigh favored council inviting more industry here rather than tourist attractions.

SPEAKERS IN BRIEF

Here are other speeches in brief:

Ald. Mulliner, for council, told of Topaz Park development which will give playground facilities to "hundreds of kiddies." He approved the debt retirement by-law and opposed cuts in boulevard watering and street maintenance for 1953.

Ald. Jim Neely, for re-election, favors the city manager set-up; privately owned and operated parking areas, a service hostel as a part of national defense, encouragement of industry, more home building.

Mrs. Jape Freedman, aldermanic candidate, called for reduction in taxes but maintenance of efficiency, abolition of road and poll tax if it is not detrimental to the city, return of the Yates Street and Victoria West fire halls, federal government to replace Point Ellice Bridge.

Millard Mooney, for council, advocated amalgamation of Greater Victoria, bigger grants from provincial and federal governments, off-street parking as a private enterprise development with civic encouragement.

Ald. Don Smith, council candidate, urged the city to encourage baseball development of Junior Chamber of Commerce and said while it was "not a 100 per cent cure for child delinquents, it is a wonderful preventive."

School Trustee Mrs. D. P. W. Maunsell believed school board should have a woman representative from Victoria. She wants to return.

At one point Mr. North declared:

"I'd like to come to the stage and tell you what I think of you... I want to get on the platform to tell you people how dumb you are."

"You don't have to go on the platform to do that, Joe," quipped lawyer Don Anderson.

"A perfect ending to the perfect meal."

THE CAINE MUTINY

Forty-third installment from the book THE CAINE MUTINY, copyright 1931, by Herman Wouk. Distributed by Doubleday Syndicate.

"Am I seeing things?" said Willie, when the cab pulled up in front of the Grotto Club. "Where's the Tahiti? Where's the Yellow Door?" Isn't this where—" "This place used to be the Yellow Door," said May. "The Tahiti is gone. That Chinese restaurant used to be the Tahiti. Nothing lasts long on this godforsaken street."

Willie sat on the little hard seat for five hours, talking to May or listening to her sing. When they came to her apartment, he was at the hotel. It was a quarter of three. Willie was suppressing yawns, and his eyes smarted. Without a word they took off their coats, lay on the bed, and kissed hungrily and wildly for a few minutes. Her forehead, her hands, felt hot to Willie's lips, but he went on kissing her anyway. At last, with a common impulse, they slowed and stopped. She looked him full in the face, her eyes shining in the dim light of the floor lamp.

"Willie, we're all washed up, aren't we?"

It is the worst question in the world. Willie didn't have to answer. The answer was on his miserable face. May said, "Then why are we doing this?"

"You're right, as usual. I am a swine. Let's stop."

"No. I still love to kiss you, unfortunately." And she kissed him again, several times. But the spoken words had snapped the sweetness. They sat up, and Willie went to the armchair. "May, what can I say? You're the most wonderful girl I'll ever know—"

"Strangely enough, that's the truth. For you, I am. Only you're too young, or you love your mother too much, or something."

She rose, and opened the zipper of her dress in an absent-minded way; went to her closet and changed into her bathrobe, not troubling to hide herself. The glimpse of her young body in the clinging slip was very painful to Willie. Then she faced him, her hands deep in the pockets of her robe. There was a tremor of uncertainty and pain about her eyes and mouth. "It's all quite definite, I suppose?"

"Yes, May."

"You kiss as though you love me. Explain that."

Willie was unable to say that he loved May's mouth, but not enough to drag her through life with him—though that would have been putting it in the simplest terms. "I don't know what love is, May. It's a word. You'll always be the image of desire for me. That's a fact, but there's more to life than that. I don't think we'd be happy together. Not because of any lack in you. Call me a snobbish prig and let it go at that. Everything that's wrong between us is wrong with me—"

"Is it because I'm poor, or dumb, or Catholic, or what? Can't you put it in words, so I'll know?"

There is only one way to get off this particular kind of griddle. Willie looked at the floor and said nothing, while long seconds of silence ticked off. Every second brought another stab of hot shame and embarrassment, and his self-respect gushed out of the wounds. May managed to say at last, in an unembittered tone, though a shaky one. "Well, all right, Willie. It must be a load off your mind, anyway."

She opened a drawer in a peeling, dirty bureau, and took out a bottle and a pillbox. "I'm going down the hall to doctor myself. I won't be long. Want to wait?"

When she came back her eyes were red, and with her make-up removed, she was very pale. She smiled slightly. "Give me a cigarette, dear. I haven't dared to smoke all day, thought my throat would close up." She took an ashtray to the bed and lay back against the cushions with a sigh. "Ah, that tastes wonderful!"

They talked some more, not much. She came to the door with him and kissed him affectionately.

We know three good reasons for borrowing from Trans Canada Credit!

First of all, Trans Canada Credit was highly recommended to us by a friend who praised their personal service on loans up to $2,500.

Next, we made an appointment and a helpful adviser told us about Trans Canada Credit's several loan plans, moderate rates and life-insured loans to $1,500.

Finally, the money was ours quickly, without delay, and we felt that borrowing had been good business for us. In Victoria, Trans Canada Credit is located at 618A Fort Street. The phone number is Beacon 4423. C. W. Paulin, branch manager.

"You're very, very good-looking, all the same," she whispered.

"I'll call you tomorrow, May. Keep well." He rang for the elevator. She stood in the doorway looking at him. When the elevator door was opened by a Negro in shirt-sleeves, she suddenly said, "Will I see you any more?"

"Sure. I'll talk to you tomorrow. Good-bye, Willie."

He did not call her the next day, nor the day after that, nor the day after that. He went to matinees with his mother, to dinner with his mother, to shows at night with his mother. He visited the family with his mother. When his mother urged him to go out by himself he glumly declined.

Sunday night Willie was in his room, dressing to go to the opera. His eye fell on his wrist watch, and he realized that in twelve hours he would be on an airplane, returning to the Caine and the court-martial. His arm reached around stiffly, like a lever in an automatic phonograph, and picked up the telephone. He called the Woodleys.

"May? How are you? It's Willie."

"Hello, dear! I'd given you up."

"I'm going back tomorrow morning. I'd like to talk to you."

"I'm working tonight, Willie."

"May I come to the club around midnight?"

"All right."

"Mother," Willie said, as they came out of the lobby of the opera house to the slushy street, "do you mind if I go on the town by myself for a while? I'll see you back home."

"Oh, hell, Willie, dear, you

"What do you want me to say, Willie?" she said when he was finished.

"I don't know, May. What do you think of it? What shall I do? What's going to happen?"

She heaved a long sigh. "Is that why you came tonight? To tell me about that?"

"I wanted you to know about it."

"Willie, I don't know much about the navy. But it doesn't seem to me you have to do anything. The navy is a pretty smart outfit. They won't condemn any of you for trying to save your ship. At worst, you made a well-meaning mistake of judgment. That isn't a crime."

Socreds to Encourage B.C. Road Transport

By BURKE CAHILL
Times Business Editor

Claiming the public interest requires more competition in the road transport industry of B.C., the new Social Credit government is moving to bring more operators into the business, provincial government officials confirmed today.

The Socred drive to open up the bus and truck business on B.C. highways to more companies is indicated by the recent granting of licenses to two firms to operate trucking services here, one on Vancouver Island and one in the Okanagan Valley.

The B.C. trucking firm of Knapp and Labelle, which was refused a license to start a trucking run in the Okanagan Valley by the Public Utilities Commission about a year ago, but appealed the decision in August, has now been granted a license, it is learned.

Vancouver Barge Transportation has also recently been licensed to run trucks between Courtenay and Campbell River in connection with its coastal shipping service.

Spokesmen for the motor transport industry in Victoria pointed out the granting of these licenses follows a similar pattern in Alberta of stimulating competition in the business.

They added the new B.C. licenses reflect Socred opposition to monopolies in any form of business.

Socred government spokesmen here said the new trucking licenses may fairly be taken as an indication of the government's general anti-monopoly stand.

They added no changes are contemplated at present, however, in the provincial laws controlling road transport here.

Spokesmen for established highway transport firms here said "an anti-monopoly drive may sound good but it may result in less satisfactory service for the B.C. public."

They cited the basic B.C. act governing the issue of motor transport licenses. This states that where satisfactory service over a route is already being given no further licenses need be granted.

Government officials stressed, however, their intention is not to produce chaos in the transport industry here by throwing it wide open to all comers but merely to stimulate competition.

THE ROCKET 'INSULTING' TO QUEBEC HOCKEY FANS

QUEBEC, Dec. 9 (CP)—A hornet's nest has been stirred up here by a column signed by hockey star Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens, which said that part of the crowds attending games at the Quebec Coliseum act like "bandits."

The column titled "Le Tour du Chapeau"—the hat trick—appeared over the N.H.L. star's signature in the Montreal week-end paper Samedi-Dimanche last week-end.

Protests have been voiced by members of the city council, local sports writers and fans. The article was described as "insulting to Quebec City."

City Clerk F. X. Chouinard is scheduled to send an official protest to Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal.

The article said Quebec City hockey fans throw coins, marbles and bottles at players on the ice and that there is no control over the crowds.

THE WEEK-END IN REVIEW—or what the scatter gunners are talking about is the great sportsmanship being exhibited by veteran Ernie Todd.

Ernie had a serious eye injury two years ago, but he hasn't let that hinder his love for the trap and skeet ranges. He's started over again from the beginning and is shooting left-handed and competing in the novice events.

"Never too old to learn," could be Ernie's motto, except that he's probably forgotten more about shooting than a lot of young bucks will ever know.

Victoria Cougars 7, Tacoma Rockets 0—For the third time in three years the Cougars have beaten the Rockets on Tacoma ice, and a smashing victory it was. Better still, the two big guns, silent for so long, exploded with a bang with Eddie Mazur and Andy Heberton playing what was reported as their best games of the year. And a tip of the hat, too, to coach Ed Dorohoy, who has refused to let his coaching problems affect his personal performance on the ice. The "pistol" may be just the guy who can provide the spark to cause the explosion that Victoria fans have been awaiting and one that could be in the making. The league trailers are catching up with the leaders now and with the Quakers and Canucks feeling the pinch, and that old sports equalizer, "the injury bugaboo," striking hard, the W.H.L. race could become closer than the next second by Christmas.

Seattle Buchanan's 66, Victoria Kins 64—The Kins are green as the summer grass, but their heart doesn't miss a beat; show them a player with Norm Baker's class, and they'll turn on the missing heat. It isn't fair to judge the local club on Saturday's showing. They were overmatched in experience. But what coach Busher Jackson did show was a club that'll give it all down to the final whistle. Victory means little at this stage of the season and Jackson gives every one of his players an equal opportunity to learn from the bitter book of experience which should pay off in the long run down the stretch.

Personal note: The new basketball rule which gives a player another try if he misses his first free shot, should go back into the ashcan.

Picking Up a Few Pieces—Thanks to Bob Noel, a visitor in Toronto on Grey Cup day, for the Eskimo football placed which Torontonians doubtless saw wherever they went. Eskimos took the town by storm, but Argos proved it was an only a slight Edmonton breeze when they got to tossin' footballs. . . . Ron Bremner, entering his third year in Commercial hockey has had only one two-minute penalty called on him in that time. . . . Ray Crabbe, who pitched for Timkeners in the senior B softball league this past summer, is piling in the points for Sea Island Air Force in the Vancouver senior B basketball league. . . . Bert Nelson was reminiscing the other night about a grey Cup final of years gone by. . . . "Those lucky Argos," said Bert of the 4-3 defeat Winnipeg Blue Bombers suffered in 1937. . . . yes, Bert was with the Bombers then. . . . Bert's been nursing a broken leg for the past few months, else he might have been pressed back into duty as a Western Hockey League linesman. . . . his record as such was a commendable one before the naval command called him to the Korean front.

Local Boy Makes Good—Ted Johnson was the leading rider of the Dominion this year. . . . Ted, it will be recalled, served his apprenticeship under Doc Darbyshire. . . . was Canada's leading rider in that apprenticeship season, second leading rider in 1950, had an injury in 1951 which kept him out of action for a long period and bounced back this year to capture the roses. . . . not bad for a kid that came off the C.P.R. boats and learned his horsemanship at the Willows. . . . Johnson had 766 mounts this year, riding 135 winners, 119 seconds and 106 thirds. . . .

Stewart Joins Habs

MONTREAL, Dec. 9 (BUP)—A lack of scoring punch has dropped the Habs from second to fifth place in the past three weeks. They haven't had a win in their past nine games.

Gordon Head Cagers Win—The come-from-behind Gordon Head Service senior cagers scored 11 points in a five-minute overtime period Saturday to hang up a 38-29 victory over Saanich senior C men in a Saanich and Suburban Basketball League game at Saanichton Hall.

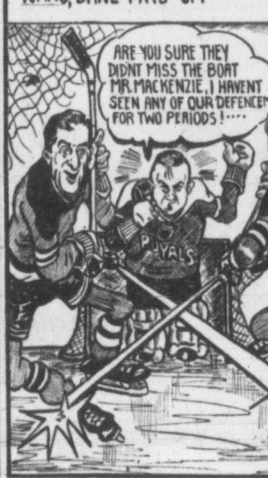

In other games on the four-game card, Saanichton biddy boys nipped Brentwood, 20-16; Saanichton junior girls doubled Stewart, 25 goals and 25 up on Brentwood for a 21-10 victory last year. In 17 games this year, he scored one goal and assisted on two others.

Late Start No Barrier To Fast-Moving Arrows

Arrow Furniture picked up their second victory in three games since their late start in the Senior B Men's Basketball League Monday night when they thumped Veterans of France, 44-36, at Victoria High School.

The win moved Arrows into third place and prevented the league-leading Vets from stretching their league advantage.

Arrows held the lead all the way, holding a slim 12-11 edge at the end of the first quarter, boosting it to 21-17 at the half and 35-26 at three-quarter time. Vets made a belated rally in the fourth quarter but it fell short.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 9 (AP)—Little Maureen Connolly of San Diego, Calif., who seems to win a championship every time she picks up her tennis racket, added another title to her list today when she teamed with Julie Sampson to win the women's doubles crown in the Victoria tournament.

The California teen-agers trimmed the top-seeded Australian pair of Mary Hawton and Beryl Penrose 6-2, 6-4 in the finals.

The Aussies' crack doubles team of Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor whipped Ken Rosewall and Lewis Hoad 6-4, 10-8, 3-6, 6-3 in an all-Australian final.

CITY HOCKEY SQUABBLE

Minor Officials Quit

There may be trouble brewing between the Victoria Minor Hockey Association and the Commercial Hockey League.

Two Minor Hockey Association officials Monday night resigned their positions following a long-standing dispute over the reinstatement of Jack Milburn, a former Nanaimo juvenile player who received an indefinite suspension for attacking a referee last season.

Bill Davidson, president, and Jack Lockie, association referee-in-chief, both abdicated after Milburn was allowed to play in the Commercial League Monday night.

The ruckus had its beginning last year when Milburn was charged with kicking Lockie during a play-off game.

However, at the annual meeting of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association in Vernon this summer the suspension was lifted. Davidson then appealed to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for a further ruling on Milburn.

Davidson asserted that he received a communication from the C.A.H.A. last month stating that the Canadian body had been informed by the B.C.A.H.A. that Milburn's suspension was still in effect.

However, Doug Fletcher, president of the Commercial League, who has been "fighting in favor of Milburn," said that at the B.C.A.H.A. meeting Milburn gave a sworn affidavit that he was not the one who kicked Lockie.

Fletcher and Dick Irving, Individual Cleaners' manager, are trying to get a 12-month probation period for Milburn. Until the case is decided, Milburn apparently has permission to play. A telegram from Dr. Larry Giovannone, president of the B.C.A.H.A. to Fletcher said that Milburn could play Commercial League hockey if the status of any player playing with or against him would not be jeopardized.

BEING PERSECUTED

"There is the whole case right there," Fletcher pointed out. "They are persecuting this lad when it is highly in doubt if he ever did attack Lockie."

In the meantime, Davidson has thrown in the towel, declaring, "I'm sorry the whole thing had to blow up just before our Minor Hockey night (Wednesday), but the Canadian body had been informed by the B.C.A.H.A. that

Merchants Take Lead; Army Beaten

Merchants 3, Navy 2
Individuals 2, Army 1

By BENNY BOYD

Who's the biggest drawing card in the Commercial Hockey League? Is it a hard-skating forward, a rugged defenseman, an agile goalie?

No, friends, it appears more and more each Monday night that the man the fans are flocking to see at Memorial Arena is referee Leo Ornest, probably the best investment the C.H.L. ever made.

Monday night there were two extremely close hockey games, Victoria Merchants nipping Navy 3-2 and Individual Cleaners shading Army 2-1.

But did the players on those victorious teams gather cheers from the 2,000 fans on hand. No, by the time the fans were through with Ornest, they were too hoarse to bestow any cheers on the competitors.

Ornest, a promoter for a professional hockey team that will not be named in deference to the C.H.L. brass, was in top form and had the fans shrieking. In the course of the two games, it was loudly rumored from the stands that Ornest was in the employ of, in turn, Army, Navy, Merchants and Individuals.

The first Ornest "incident" occurred during the Merchant-Navy game. The central figure was Navy's Stan Christensen, who is under Navy orders to refrain from fighting under penalty of losing his place on the club.

TURN'S OTHER CHEEK

Probably with this parole threat hanging over his head, big Stan took it all in stoic inactivity when Merchant's Maurie Clark landed a couple of boffos on his whiskers. But for turning the other cheek, Christensen found himself sentenced to a high-sticking penalty. While the fans grieved, Stan said nasty words and got an extra 10 minutes.

In the Army-Individual game, all was quiet for two periods. But at the stroke of 2:45 of the third period, all manner of mayhem broke loose. Army's Doug Grant, possibly the most honest man in organized hockey, started it when, in his own words, "I checked Courtall and he looked kinda mad so I thought I better poke him before he poked me". Quick as a wink there was a wild melee in front of the Army goal with punches falling like spring rain.

NO PINK TALK

When Ornest and his running mate, Bill Hatcher, finally separated the combatants four penalties were handed out, Grant and Art Green drawing five and Army's Bob Burrows getting two minutes. Burrows was last seen trying to act as peacemaker between two brawlers who, incidentally, were not penalized. Those penalties and the four that followed before the game ended, gave the fans plenty to talk about and talk they did in words that would be foreign in a girls' finishing school.

But to the hockey. By their slim victory, Merchants slid into first place and the way they are playing they may be there for a long time.

CONCEDE FIRST GOAL

After conceding a first-period goal to Standley while a man short, Merchants bounced back on a goal by speedy Ken Gunter, assisted by Toby Brown, who stayed in a tie with Standley for top place in the individual scoring race.

Ron Bremner put Merchants into the lead half a minute later with a drifting shot from the blue-line.

John Smith, with the help of a Navy defenseman who fell on Jones, scored the winning goal at 11:06 of the third period to off-set a Russ McKay's Navy counter a minute later.

The Army-Individual game was unspectacular as both clubs played cautious hockey. Cleaners had the benefit of an impressive start by new goalie Spanky Hodgson, a former junior.

NEWS TO LEADER

Canuck Protest Won't Get Far

If Vancouver Canucks intend to officially protest their 4-0 loss to New Westminster Royals, it's news to Western Hockey League president G. A. "Al" Leader.

It was reported that the Canucks were protesting the loss on the grounds that the penalty time-keeper at New Westminster had become confused during a series of first-period penalties Saturday night and the penalties had been incorrectly timed.

Specifically, Vancouver charged that Don Slater had been allowed on the ice four seconds before his penalty was up and Jerry Cabana had served only 25 seconds of a two-minute minor penalty.

However, Leader said Monday night that he had checked with the time-keeper and in his (Leader's) opinion, there had been no mix-up and no grounds for protest.

Major League Pilots Dealing in 'Oil' Now

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 9 (AP)—If ever a minor league club owner had "connections" with the major leagues it's Dick Burnett, the fellow who has been crying out against "chain baseball" player monopoly.

These connections, however, have nothing to do with ball players. The wealthy oil man, who operates the Dallas franchise in the Texas League, is partners with 13 of the 16 major league managers in the drilling of an oil well in Arkansas. He expects the other three to come in shortly to make his connections with the majors unanimous.

It all started at the baseball meeting in Phoenix. Burnett previously had been associated with Paul Richards, manager of Chicago White Sox, in an oil deal. Preparing to drill a new well at Stephens, Ark., Burnett offered Richards the opportunity to buy an interest. Then he decided he also would take in the other big league managers.

Most of them quickly got on the line, paying around $8,000 apiece for a 1-32 interest.

WORKS BOTH ENDS AGAINST THE MIDDLE

Ray Cares for Ray

By MURRAY ROSE

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—At first glance it might seem the New York Athletic Commission was a little trigger-happy in shooting Sugar Ray off his throne in the Empire State, even if only for the time being.

But chairman Bob Christenberry and his two helpers have dealt before with Robinson and manager George Gairford, so their impatience and irritation is quite understandable.

In dealing with the peevish champion and his manager, you start off with the premise that "A" is "Z" and vice versa. After travelling the short road the long way, a deal is sometimes made.

While discussing the commission's action, Christenberry said that Robinson had told him only a few days before that he was "through fighting."

Dr. Vincent Nardiello, Ray's personal physician, has insisted all along that Ray won't fight again. The graceful boxer, now displaying his talent as a singer and dancer in nightclubs, had a neat plastic surgery job done on his nose, and had the web of scars over his eyes removed.

Now Ray says he'll have just one more fight with Randy Turpin and call it quits, win or lose. Could it be that Ray wants a little publicity to go with his act?

From what we've heard, Robinson plans to take his show overseas to London and Paris, where he's considered the greatest thing next to the U.S. buck.

Ex-champions, even retired undefeated champions, are quickly forgotten, and no one knows that better than dapper Ray and big George.

Before he won the welterweight and later the middleweight championships, Ray was known as the "runout king." Even if a promoter had his signature on the dotted line, he had to sweat it out until he saw the Sugar Man dance into the ring.

Ray has been a great fighter and he has a charming personality. He has enough business enterprises going to keep him in low-slung, tuchisa convertibles for a long time.

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AP)—Jack Hurley, usually a happy, gabby, fight manager, sat dejectedly in his hotel room talking about the ailing back of his heavyweight, Harry "Kid" Matthews, and "the loss of one of the biggest purses ever offered us."

Matthews Monday cancelled his Wednesday fight with the British heavyweight champion, Johnny Williams, when a five-day-old injury to his lower back failed to heal.

"Why, the boy hardly could get off a punch," Hurley said in describing a short, unsuccessful workout Matthews took to determine if he was fit to meet Williams.

Jack Solomons, London fight promoter, watched Matthews for a moment during the workout and called the Seattle, Wash., heavy out of the fight.

After announcing Matthews could not fight, Solomons said he would substitute Werner Wiegand, champion of Luxembourg. Hurley declined to say how much Solomons guaranteed Matthews.

Wings' Rise Reflected In N.H.L. Scoring Race

MONTREAL, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Gordie Howe headed the National Hockey League scoring statistics for the third straight week today, while three of his Detroit teammates nailed down spots in the top 10.

Howe, with 27 points in 25 games, was two up on New York's Wally Hergesheimer and linemate Ted Lindsay, himself a two-time scoring champion.

From there on, it was the Red Wings' show. The drive that carried the Wings from fifth to first in the six-team loop was mirrored by the rise of sophomore Alex Delvecchio to sixth in scoring with 22 points, and Metro Prystai to seventh with 20.

Only Maurice Richard of the Montreal Canadiens, fourth with 24 points, and Ted Kennedy of the Toronto Maple Leafs, fifth with 23, broke up the act.

WALL OF PREJUDICE

The noise in the streets woke me up before 5 a.m. Groups of young people and workers were heading for the assembly point to get ready for the parade. From the window of my room I could see the torches and the flags and I could hear the shouting and the songs.

It was 9.45 a.m. when we arrived at the grandstand reserved for foreigners. At 10 a.m., Mao-Tse-tung appeared. Loudspeakers blared the national anthem and guns fired a salute. The parade started opposite the Winter Palace.

For more than an hour we watched a parade of foot soldiers, aviators, sailors, paratroopers, cavalrymen, Mongols on ponies, motorized regiments, anti-aircraft batteries, artillery, motorized infantry, machine guns mounted on motor bikes, rapid-fire artillery, light and heavy tanks, bombers, fighters and light infantry.

Then the civilians took over. For more than two hours we watched half a million Chinese march past in fine form. 50 to a row. There was a tremendous profusion of portraits, photographs, banners, flags and torches. Marx, Lenin, Stalin, Engels, Mao-Tse-tung, Chou-En-lai and Chou-Teh, repeated over and over again, reminded us of the parade's purpose.

The young Chinese stayed in tune when they sang and the girls held bouquets of flowers in their arms. Others released hundreds of doves in front of the main grandstand. The doves had red ribbons attached to their tail feathers. A regiment of little Chinese girls passed by with clenched fists raised. A whole corps of cymbals and Chinese drums, nearly 2,000 in all, raised such a row that the atmosphere became positively hysterical.

A WONDERFUL TIME

The Chinese of Peking are animated and effervescent. They like noise and music, torches, parades, costumes and uniforms. They seem to be having a wonderful time and they don't hide their pride in the fact that so many strangers have come such a long way to admire them. The parade, therefore, was a good thing and expressed a real feeling of strength.

In a people's democracy, a holiday wouldn't be complete unless the workers had a big part in it. They had their place in the parade, marching past according to their trades and factories. They paraded with samples of the articles and machines they had made. The whole business went off with a great deal of singing, shouting, commands and clenched fists.

The parade wound up with gymnastics and theatre groups. Young girls in shorts and sweaters contrasted oddly with the old women whom you see toddling everywhere around the city on their bound and crippled feet.

It was all over at 2 p.m. Half a million Chinese had paraded past us in four hours.

BETTER THAN HITLER

In 1937 I watched the Nazis and Fascists on parade. I've seen the Germans march and the Italians sing the glories of Mussolini. But I think the parade here improved in the last 15 years. The one I saw at Peking was a little more successful than those which used to be seen on the Via de L'Impero in Rome or on the Unter den Linden in Berlin.

I said as much to some of the other foreign spectators. The non-Communists agreed with me. But the Communists seemed to be quite offended by the comparison. I particularly remember good old Nazim Hikmet, a Turkish poet who was living in Moscow. He spent a good five minutes telling me the difference between a Communist and a Nazi parade.

According to him, Hitler stole the idea of the spontaneous demonstration from the Reds. He told me that Communist parades, even if they are preceded by a military show of strength, are inspired by the idea of peace, while Nazi parades...

It just goes to show that two people can witness the same event and draw entirely different conclusions from it. But still, there are certain times when Picasso's dove shows its vulture's beak and claws.

Truck's Lock Breaks; One Mail Bag Still Missing

VANCOUVER, Dec. 9 (CP)—

Two bags of mail tumbled to the streets Monday night when the tailgate lock snapped on a postal truck heading for the main post office building.

The loss was not discovered until the driver reached his destination.

A young boy returned one of the bags, police said, but one is still missing. The youth found the bag at the rear of the Technical School on the Grandview Highway.

Postal inspectors and police are continuing the hunt for the other bag.

Safety Council Warning Timely As First Snow Flies on Malahat

First snow has appeared on the Malahat, and for the next three months motorists can expect slippery and dangerous conditions on streets and highways.

There are certain basic precautions to eliminate the bulk of winter driving danger listed by the National Safety Council.

They are:

Get the feel of the road. Try brakes occasionally, while driving slowly and away from other traffic, to find out just how slippery the road is.

Slow down. Adjust speed to road and weather conditions so that stops and other manoeuvres can be performed safely.

Keep windshield clear. Danger must be seen to be avoided, so perfect operation of windshield wipers, headlights, and defrosters is an absolute necessity.

Pump brakes to slow down or stop. Sudden jamming of brakes will lock wheels and throw a car into a dangerous skid.

Follow at a safe distance. Keep well back of the car in front, because without tire chains it takes from three to 12 times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry concrete.

Remember that synthetic tires, standard on passenger cars, skid farther on snow and ice, and have poorer forward traction, than pre-war natural rubber tires.

Tire chains reduce stopping distance in snow and ice by one-half, increase traction from four to seven times, and are described as "the best self-help available to the driver."

Why Monel nails, Dad?

"Well, here on the coast we have to remember what salt water can do to a boat. The salt-rusts right through steel nails, but it has scarcely any effect on Monel, which is about two-thirds nickel and one-third copper."

"Is Monel used for anything besides nails?"
"It sure is! Propeller shafts are made of Monel because it is extremely strong and tough and doesn't rust in salt water. That's why Monel is used so much too in plants where salt is made."

"How about Monel in acids, dad?"
"Sulphuric acids have less effect on Monel than on most other metals. In fact Monel baskets are used to hold steel which has to be dipped in acid in steel plants."

Chain Gang Helped Build City Roads

Chain gangs made up of city jail inmates were a common sight in Victoria in the early 1900's, Neil Swainson, staff member of Victoria High School told a supper meeting of the A.O. T.S. group at First United Church Monday.

The convicts helped build city roads.

Titling his talk "Lifting Victoria's Face," Mr. Swainson stated construction in the main was carried out systematically, with the original fort as the heart of all planning until the early 1900's.

PEARSON BLASTS RED PEACE CLAIMS

U.N. President Charges Russia With Campaigns of Hatred and Falsehood

By JAMES R. NELSON
British United Press Staff Correspondent

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Russia's belief in "peaceful co-existence" between the east and west has already fallen flat, External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson told the House of Commons Monday.

"The Communist imperialists have not produced the evidence that their policies have in fact become compatible with their peaceful confessions," he said.

Pearson flew here from New York where he has been president of the United Nations General Assembly to make an important policy statement in Parliament. He said:

1. While the danger of war in Europe is lessening, the North Atlantic Treaty nations must not rest on their oars, and must consolidate their military strength while pressing on with the economic phases of the alliance.

2. It's a 50-50 toss, up whether Communist China and North Korea will accept the India-sponsored United Nations peace proposal which he sent to Peking and Pyongyang last week with a personal appeal for acceptance.

3. Canada believes the U.N. General Assembly, as "the town meeting of the world" is competent to discuss South Africa's racial laws but is not competent to send investigators into the country or take action against the nation.

Pearson said Russia's belief that the East and West could live in peaceful co-existence had been put forward by the Communists at a time they "mounted an offensive of propaganda and subversion designed to weaken, confuse and discourage the democracies."

"The ideal of peaceful co-existence, in which indeed every man of good will must believe, presupposes an absence of aggressive intention," he said.

"Genuine policy of peaceful co-existence implies a readiness to co-operate for the purpose of peace and the promotion of human welfare. Instead of a readiness to co-operate for these purposes, the Communist imperialists resort to propaganda campaigns of hatred and falsehood.

"Peaceful co-existence in Soviet terminology seems indeed to mean simply, all mischief short of war."

Minister Denies Connection With Connelly Case

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson said neither he nor any official of his department had any connection with the retirement of Brig. Alan B. Connelly, 44, former head of the Canadian military mission in Tokyo.

He gave this denial in the Commons Monday during Throne Speech debate.

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (P.C.-Nanaimo), referred December 1 to the retirement of Brig. Connelly, which became known in October. of a Canadian company to help quell prisoner-of-war riots on Kote Island.

General Pearkes, in his speech, referred to an external affairs protest to Washington concerning use of the Canadian soldiers without consultation. He said the department apparently seemed to "go off half-cocked" as there had been consultation on the spot.

Mr. Pearson denied any connection with the Connelly incident. He said neither he nor any official of his department had made any representation to the defense department in any form.

NEW 'TRAIN-BUSTER CLUB' MEMBER

Destroyer Crusader Smashes Red Railway

ABOARD H.M.C.S. CRUSADER, Dec. 9 (CP)—This Canadian destroyer qualified as a member of the "train-buster club" in a recent night patrol off the east coast of Korea.

The Crusader, commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. John Bovey of Montreal, for some nights had stationed herself close to the enemy shore where a railway runs near the beach. Gun crews stood by their weapons, ready to open up the instant a train appeared.

Their shooting would have to be quick and accurate. There was only about 1,000 yards of exposed track running between two tunnels, with a smaller tunnel in the centre. With the train travelling between 25 and 30 miles an hour, the gunners didn't have much time.

ENGINE IS TARGET
Their instructions were to get the engine, thus stopping the train. However, the first night the Crusader gunners managed to knock off only two box cars and on succeeding nights there were no trains. On the last night of the patrol the chance came. The moment the train came in sight the 4.5-inch guns stopped it cold with one salvo.

When smoke cleared there was no sign of the engine, but it soon reappeared from the centre tunnel, smoke and steam pouring from every seam. The gunners gave it their full attention, but it disappeared again, so the Crusader turned her attention to the 13 boxcars left behind.

Air spotters reported at dawn: "Remains of 13 cars on and near railway, all badly damaged, several burned out, track cut in at least three places, with sections of rail hanging down embankment. Engine turned over at bottom of embankment. Railway completely blocked."

As she headed for port, the Crusader received this message from the commander of task force 95: "Welcome to the train busters club."

LONDON, Dec. 9 (AP)—A comedian tossed a bottle of champagne into the audience Monday night.

The catcher was Princess Margaret. She had slipped unnoticed with a party of six into the Victoria Palace Theatre just before the curtain went up for the show "Ring Out Bells."

ATOMIC POWER 'LIMITLESS'

1 Pound of Atom Equals 12 Million Tons of Coal

MONTREAL, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Five pounds of atoms someday may produce atomic energy equal to 60,000,000 tons of coal or 57,000,000,000 kilowatt hours, Dr. D. A. Keys, director of Canada's Chalk River atomic energy project, said Monday night.

He told the Young Men's Section of the Board of Trade that the possibilities of obtaining power from atomic materials for individual and domestic purposes are limitless.

"The best that atomic energy reactors can do today, he said, is to obtain one tenth of one per cent of the possible energy from uranium 235. In theory, this would be equal to a labor force of more than 53,000 men for a year."

He said the reactor at Chalk River is the only one in existence that can make a strong "cobalt bomb," used to destroy malignant cancer cells.

He said that it is actually the most powerful atomic reactor in the world and that another even more powerful one was being constructed.

"We don't make atom bombs, but we do have in Canada the

Ribbon Development's Opponents Irked by Government Indifference

A Saanich councillor Monday charged Public Works Minister P. A. Gagliardi with "sitting on the fence" with regard to the controversial issue of ribbon development along the new Patricia Bay highway.

Councillor Leslie Passmore at a council meeting said the public works minister had failed to answer two letters asking him if the provincial government wanted to maintain the highway as a fast route to Patricia Bay airport.

The minister was criticized by the councillor when an application for rezoning of part of two lots on Sayward Road, at the Patricia Bay Highway, came up for reconsideration before council.

Mr. Campbell's application was turned down by the council several weeks ago pending the government's ruling.

"I was ready to support the government if it had recommended that the highway be kept clear of ribbon development," said Mr. Passmore. "But the public works minister has taken no stand. He has just kept sitting on the fence."

The councillor said that in view of the government's attitude he would henceforth support ribbon development along the whole of the highway.

Other councillors, who had hoped that the highway would be maintained for fast traffic to the airport, also expressed disappointment at the government's non-committal attitude. They agreed to rezone Mr. Campbell's property.

It's HARD to realize that less than one hundred years ago aluminum was a precious metal, priced at $17 an ounce. In fact, Queen's University at Kingston, Ont., presented the first graduate from its chemistry course with an aluminum medal in 1858.

Nowadays the price of aluminum is 18¢ a pound. How is it that a dollar buys as much aluminum today as it did before the war, while it buys so much less of most other things? One big reason is the increasing use of aluminum—ten times that of 15 years ago. Volume production keeps production costs down. Aluminum is not only light and strong—it is low in price too. ## BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

I notice that the newspapers are very free with their handy helpful hints to housewives, and I am convinced these hints are both handy and helpful.

But I also notice, what the newspapers do not have, are handy, helpful hints to househusbands. And goodness knows, househusband often stands more in need of a handy, helpful hint than does a housewife.

Well, no sooner does Between Times recognize a need, than it rushes bravely in, to fill that need.

Here are a handful of H.H.H. for househusbands.

Househusbands are expected to be able to fix everything. Here is what to do when the top bureau drawer sticks. Fix it so that all the things in the top bureau drawer are things you never use anyway.

Here is a handy hint for househusbands who are troubled by the lights going out in the house.

Get a large metal can, for instance, an anti-freeze can. Empty out the anti-freeze, or whatever the contents might be.

Wash the can out thoroughly, using your favorite household cleanser and plenty of hot water.

Now, fill the can full of nice, fresh money, and take it down to the light company, and pay the bill.

Quite a few househusbands have trouble because they own dogs, and their favorite wives do not entirely appreciate dogs.

(I hasten to say, this is not true of my favorite wife. She appreciates dogs just fine, although she sometimes does not appreciate husbands).

However, if your wife objects to your dog getting up on the furniture, try this simple solution:

Buy an extra chair, preferably the automatic reclining type, with positions for sitting, reading, sleeping, and doing crossword puzzles.

Cover this chair with several layers of old potato sack, and explain to your dog that this chair—and this one only—is his.

Of course, the dog will ignore the chair and go on getting up on all the other furniture. But at least you will have a chair you can call your own.

Every househusband should learn a few tricks in the kitchen, to amuse his wife, and make her glad she is married to him.

Housewives especially appreciate having things done with leftovers, and I have discovered a wonderful use for leftover chopped olives.

On nights when I am bored, I put the pieces together.

There is a simple way to cure your wife of nagging when you come into the house with muddy feet, tracking dirt all over the floor.

Don't come into the house any more.

Some wives have a nasty breakfast table habit. They insist on asking their husbands, "What would you like for dinner tonight?"

The way to cure this is, answer her, saying "Breaded breast of Scottish moor grain-fed grouse, under glass."

Then, when she serves you breaded breast of grouse under glass, complain "Where is that stew I asked for?"

This will quickly cure her of asking you at breakfast what you would like for dinner.

Come to think of it, it will also cure her of cooking dinner.

Dr. T. H. Johns will appear as guest soloist with the 60-voice Schubert Club Choir at Oak Bay United Church tonight at 8.15.

Condition of Mrs. Ozemac M. McCulloch, 63, of 923 Agnes, injured in a city traffic accident Sunday night, continues as "poor," attendants at Royal Jubilee Hospital reported today.

Police said Mrs. McCulloch, a pedestrian, sustained chest injuries and head and face bruises when she was hit by a car on Douglas at Herald, driven by Doreen M. Weismiller, 1727 Bank.

Robert R. Bryan, B-14 Belmont Housing project, who went through two stop signs and two red traffic lights Nov. 30 while being chased by Constable Eric Rossiter, was fined $35 in city police court today.

He pleaded guilty to careless driving.

Saanich firemen Monday night put out a fire in a half-ton pickup truck in the basement garage of the home of Alfred Sheard, 845 Cowper. About $75 damage was done to the vehicle, owned by the contracting firm of T. Lambie and Son.

Everett M. Gibbons, 533 Admirals, was fined a total of $75, or in default 10 days in jail when he pleaded guilty in city police court today to two driving charges. He was fined $40 for careless driving and an additional $35 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. His license was suspended by Magistrate H. C. Hall.

Department of Transport reports that repairs have been completed on Kelp (Comox) Bar gas and bell buoy. Helmsken Island light in Johnstone Strait, and Chup Point Light in Barclay Sound. All are now operating correctly.

'O CANADA' NOT ABANDONED

Brass Lack, No Oversight Stilled Beloved Chords

Hans Gruber, conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, today squelched a rumor that the orchestra has abandoned the playing of "O Canada" at the opening of its concerts.

Monday night it was not played. His reason—he did not have his full orchestra on the stage at the beginning of the concert. "We opened our program with Mozart's 'Eine Kleine Nachtmusik,' which calls for strings alone," Mr. Gruber said. "One would not be doing justice to 'O Canada' to play it with just the strings. It needs the full orchestra."

According to Audrey St. D. Johnson, Times music critic, a good many patrons during the intermission were wondering why the omission had been made.

Some of the comments are: "It's been a pleasure to hear 'O Canada' the way our orchestra plays it." "Why should we have any anthem if we're going to drop 'O Canada'?" "I'm a non-Canadian—but I missed it." "It seemed a very flat begin-

Poultry 'Queen' Under Glass

What is claimed to be the world's champion egg-laying hen has been stuffed, not for the dinner table, but for the Provincial Department of Agriculture. The bird, after a trip to a taxidermist, has been sent to the Parliament Buildings, where, in the picture, it is being admired by staff member Mrs. Margaret McAloney. The hen, which laid 357 eggs in 365 days at the Agassiz Experimental Farm, has been placed in a glass showcase for all to see.

Federal Aid Hinted To Irrigate Saanich

Agriculture Minister Urges Upon Ottawa Farm Rehabilitation Act Extension

A federal irrigation scheme to alleviate drought conditions in Saanich, Duncan and other areas in British Columbia may be introduced next year.

This was indicated today by Agriculture Minister W. K. Kierman who recently returned from Ottawa where he discussed agricultural problems with federal officials.

The minister said he had long discussions with regard to the extension of the "Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act" to include British Columbia.

The act, which so far only applies to the three prairie provinces, provides farmers with financial assistance for irrigation.

The results of the Ottawa talks on irrigation, the minister said, will not be made known until the matter has been discussed at cabinet level.

Charles E. S. Walls, secretary of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said he hoped the federal irrigation scheme will be introduced into the province next year as drought conditions in certain parts of B.C. have become serious problems.

It was pointed out that the irrigation scheme was to have been introduced here last year but due to large expenses for national defense, the program was postponed.

There is keen speculation as to what district would first benefit by the federal irrigation program.

Saanich and Duncan are two districts which have been seeking irrigation for years.

Some officials feel, however, the "north country" around Prince George and McBride would be the first districts to receive relief under the Farm Rehabilitation Act.

Woman Fined $35

A fine of $35 was imposed against Agnes Forbes Creighton, 1412 Oliver, when she was found guilty in city police court Monday on a charge of careless driving. Charge arose from an accident she was involved in last month at Richmond and Oak Bay Avenues.

Woman Fined $35

Mr. Witte states that his sister, Grace and family are still living on the property. G. Conway Parrott, chairman of the tourist group, stated after an interview with Mr. Witte: "Our only concern is that the property should not be subdivided to prevent the possibility of acquiring it for public use."

The Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, an authority on matters patriotic, gives precedence to "The Queen."

"Every I.O.D.E. meeting, large or small, closes with the singing of 'The Queen,' an officer of the organization said. 'Larger meetings, however, are frequently opened with 'O Canada.'"

Graham Steed, organist and choirmaster at Christ Church Cathedral, who deplores the playing of national anthems at concerts, did not miss "O Canada" Monday night, and found the opening atmosphere "just right."

"Our national songs and anthems certainly have a place," he said, "but my choice of programming would be to play 'The Queen' at the beginning of a concert and let that suffice. I don't think we need both."

Higher Court Trial Ordered In Gun Case

Companion Given Wednesday Remand

Alan Harris, 27, of Winnipeg, one of two men arrested by city detectives at gun-point outside the Hudson's Bay Co. store Dec. 1, today was committed for trial on a charge of having unlawful custody of a pistol.

His companion, Melvin Lawrence Cliff, 20, of Kirkland Lake, Ont., who pleaded guilty to unlawful custody of the .32 automatic pistol, was remanded to Wednesday for sentence by Magistrate H. C. Hall in police court today.

Magistrate Hall said he wished more time to peruse a probation officer's report on Cliff before passing sentence.

A conviction could bring a penalty of up to five years in prison.

Following Harris' preliminary hearing, his counsel, J. Ronald Grant, asked for a dismissal on the grounds there was no crown evidence to prove Harris had knowledge that Cliff had the pistol in his possession. Prosecutor Alan Bigelow acted for the crown.

UP TO JURY

"Whether he knew of the possession or not, is up to a jury to decide," said Magistrate Hall in committing Harris for trial.

Evidence of city detectives—Alex Briggs, Angus Munro, Ray Maitland and William Andrews—was that the accused were accused in a car opposite the Piggard Street entrance to the Bay.

Detectives said Harris was behind the wheel in the car, Cliff on his right in the front seat.

"Cliff had a white handkerchief around his neck joined together by a rubber band," Det. Briggs told the court. He said that on the seat between them were two jockey caps, gloves and two large paper shopping bags. These were entered as exhibits.

CLIFF CARRIED GUN

On searching the pair at the detective office, the plainclothesmen said Cliff was found to be in possession of the fully-loaded automatic. It was tucked in his waistband, but covered by a sweater. Cliff also had a reserve clip of cartridges in his possession, according to evidence.

Harris did not have a gun on his person, officers testified.

It was established that Harris had rented a room at a downtown hotel Nov. 6. Asked if anyone had shared the room with Harris, hotel manager George Ray said "No."

Under cross-examination by Mr. Grant, the manager said that a Cpl. Millgram, of the army, had stayed with Harris for approximately two weeks.

Evidence of Eileen Brinn, R.C.M.P. clerk, was that the automatic found in Cliff's possession was not registered in B.C.

Mr. Grant claimed in his summing up that the Crown had not established a "prima facie" case against Harris.

Counsel entered a plea of not guilty to a second charge against Harris alleging he obtained the sum of $20 by means of a worthless cheque from the Hudson's Bay Co. store. Summary trial on this charge will be held Dec. 12.

City Names New Assistant Engineer

James C. Garnett, British-born and trained, who was a partner in a London firm of management consultants has been appointed assistant city engineer by City Manager Cecil Wyatt.

Mr. Garnett served with London's metropolitan water board and West Gloucester Water Board. He was recently with a Vancouver manufacturing concern. Mr. Garnett is a B.C. chartered civil engineer, mechanical engineer and construction engineer.

Mr. Garnett will be in charge of the city's water supply and sewerage system, and will also be in charge of the city's public works department.

Ships Turned Back By Dangerous Seas

SURGING SHIP SEPARATES PAIR AT END OF SEVEN-MONTH TOUR

A seven-month trip abroad for Mr. and Mrs. R. O. King, 2098 Granite Street, ended in a temporary separation by sea at Ogden Point Docks this morning.

The width of sea dividing them was less than 10 feet—but it might as well have been 10 miles.

Mr. and Mrs. King were passengers on Ss. Pacific Reliance when she docked here Monday night. They decided to spend the night aboard, and at 10 o'clock this morning Mr. King went ashore to check on baggage and customs.

Before he returned, Pacific Reliance worked herself away from the docks, pushed by freshening winds, and the lower section of the companionway fell into the water.

Then the ship surged back again, breaking the companionway.

However, the Kings were not separated long. Crew and longshoremen rigged a jury gangway.

B.C. Seeks to Control Ribbon Development

Public Works Minister Reveals Plan To Control Building on Main Arteries

Legislation controlling "ribbon development" along British Columbia's main highways will be introduced at the spring session of the legislature, which opens Feb. 3, Public Works Minister Philip A. Gagliardi said today.

"Ribbon development" is the term used to describe the practice of establishing commercial enterprises along main roads. The development is spread out along the highway, with no depth, and impedes traffic.

The minister made the statement about proposed legislation while commenting on a Saanich council controversy over ribbon development on the new Patricia Bay Highway.

Councillor Les Passmore accused Mr. Gagliardi of "fence sitting" on the issue at Monday's meeting.

Replied the minister today: "I'm no fence sitter. Everybody knows that. I shouldn't even bother to deny it."

Council apparently had asked the public works department's advice when a service station operator applied for access to the new highway.

Mr. Gagliardi said his department could do nothing about the council's predicament because there's no legislation to cover the situation.

"Our hands are tied until the session when we'll get some law on this ribbon development," said the minister.

BLAN WAS SHELVED

The former government had prepared legislation governing ribbon development for presentation to the last session. But when the Coalition government broke up, and the session was called to deal with essential business only, the ribbon development legislation was shelved.

Businesses have sprung up along lengthy sections of B.C. highways resulting in traffic congestion and destroying the pur-

City Radiomen Favor Pool To Bring TV Service Here

Likelihood of Victoria's two radio stations entering into a joint arrangement for operating this city's first television station was given added weight today.

David M. Armstrong, owner-manager of radio station CKDA, acknowledged the C.B.C. had recommended that in localities where more than one radio station were interested in securing a TV license, the companies concerned should enter into a joint operation pact.

Asked to comment on the suggestion, Mr. Armstrong said he was interested "in any scheme or operation" which would bring television to the city.

He said he intended visiting U.S. centres which have jointly operated television stations to determine the practicability of such operations.

W. M. Guild, manager of radio station CJVI commented on the C.B.C. proposal Monday, observing there were certain definite advantages with regard to bearing the initially heavy financial burden and cost of operation.

Certain word that the C.B.C. will only allow one television outlet in Victoria was given in the House of Commons Monday by Revenue Minister McCann.

Both radio stations earlier had submitted individual applications for television licenses. CJVI put in its bid in 1945. CKDA made application last year.

50-M.P.H. Winds Send C.P.R. Ship, Tug to Shelter

Southeast winds today lashed Victoria with gusts up to 50 miles per hour.

The weatherman said a low pressure area off this coast is slowly working its way toward the Queen Charlotte Islands, but that all B.C. and Washington waters are feeling the force of the storm.

According to the forecasts the wind will swing 90 degrees to the southwest at a slower 25 miles per hour by this evening.

Wednesday will be cloudy with showers as the flow of moist Pacific air continues, the weatherman said.

Even with today's low tide spray was blown across Dallas Road at Ross Bay Cemetery.

Oak Bay Boat House, unprotected in the path of the gale, is safe for the winter with all boats on shore and floats moved to shelter, according to the management.

Coast-wise shipping in Juan de Fuca Strait, Gulf of Georgia, and off the West Coast of Vancouver Island felt the force of high winds and heavy seas.

Ss. Motor Princess, the B.C. Coast Service ship on the Victoria-Vancouver freight run, turned back to Victoria short of Trial Island this morning, in the face of dangerous seas.

The Canadian National Railway tug C.N.R. No. 2, towing a railway car barge, fought her way out to Trial Island, but was also forced to turn back.

'FULL GREEN SEA'

The master of the tug reported winds up to 50 miles an hour in the vicinity of the Island. "It was a full green sea beyond Trial," he said. The tug, with its unwieldy tow, made a heavy weather on the return to Ogden Point.

Winds were comparatively moderate when Motor Princess and the tug left, but freshened rapidly as the barometer dropped.

Ss. Princess Joan, on the C.P.R.'s morning Seattle run, gave crew and passengers a rough voyage as she buried herself deep in the choppy seas. Mv. Chinook took spray over her wheelhouse as she headed for Port Angeles.

Towboats in coastal waters "holed up" in coves and harbors to wait out the storm.

City fire department had attended four chimney fires by press time, but in Esquimalt, Saanich and Oak Bay firemen reported "all quiet."

B.C. Electric officials said "trouble-shooters" were ready to repair any damage that might be caused, but the company came through the morning's high wind unscathed.

Patrols Enforcing Load Regulations On Island Highway

Load limitations are being enforced on the Island Highway by R.C.M.P. patrols.

Tightening of control follows an increase in accidents involving heavily loaded vehicles.

A representative of Highway Sawmills Ltd. paid $10 in R.C.M.P. court at Colwood Saturday for an over-width load.

Police say in future trucks will be checked for over-width, over-length, over-height and generally unsafe loading or speeding. Public Works Department regulations govern truck loads.

Young Women Recruits With R.C.A.F. Love New Life

Through the R.C.A.F. recruiting unit in Victoria, during November, went 42 young men and women for the colorful "junior service." F.O. Gordon Smith, of the city unit, has been at the Manning Depot, St. Johns, P.Q., to observe the various training processes. He interviewed Victoria recruits there. "Any complaints?" he asked. ## SHOPPING GUIDE

Little Girl on the Doll Counter Wants a Home

By PENNY SAVER

You may not have been aware of it, but just a couple of weeks ago a very cute little girl stepped out of the pages of the funny paper and hopped up on the counter of one of Victoria's stores.

She's sitting on that counter right now waiting for some Mummy and Daddy to come along and take her home for Christmas. She'll be ever so happy if she had a little sister to play with, too.

This little girl already has a name. It's "Joan" and when she was in her home in the funny papers she had an awfully nice Daddy named "Joe Palooka," the fighter, you know. All her Daddy's friends were very kind to her and she's hoping her new home will be as good.

Little Joan has a cooling voice and she's sprinkled from head to toe with talcum powder and smells as "perdy" as can be. Just in case you want to use some more talcum after you give her a bath (she's completely washable), there's a little tin of talcum she will bring home with her.

Joan Palooka is only asking you to give the storekeeper $7.50 so she can go home with you.

Next to Joan on the doll counter is another little girl looking for a home.

In fact, she's so excited about the prospect, her little heart is going "plunketa, plunketa, plunketa." You see, she's a heart-beat doll. Instead of making little crying sounds, she just "plunks."

The kiddie with the "throb" has beautiful long locks and if her new "Mummy" wants to, she can set it in curlers to keep it neat and curly.

This doll's price tag is marked at $7.50 also—this includes the special curlers for her hair.

Your little boy, or any young fellow for that matter, will be crazy about a new car that is on sale in toyland this year. It's called an accident car and it really takes a beating. You wind it up, let 'er go, and as soon as it hits something, the car flies apart just as though it has seen it last.

However, it fits back together with no difficulty and is ready for another "crack-up."

Sells for 69 pennies.

AS WE LIVE

Lack of Energy Causes Old People's Carelessness

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, Ph.D.

You can't expect an elderly person to do things like a young person. That is why this young woman is so tolerant toward her mother-in-law.

Hurlock

(Q) "We live with my husband's mother. She has a lovely home and furnishings. But everything is a mess. She is so careless about everything she does and never keeps herself or her home in good order. My husband tells me she was never like this before. Do you think she is letting things slip so I will do them? She knows I am a very particular housekeeper."

(A) To a limited extent, your mother-in-law may be allowing things to be partially done in the hopes that you will take over the responsibility of doing them for her. But, I am sure, most of her carelessness comes from old age.

As people become old, they have less energy than they had when they were younger. They also move more slowly and with greater effort. Hence, they begin to cut corners whenever possible. A task that was easy for them in the prime of their lives becomes a major burden as they grow older.

Instead of being critical or intolerant of your mother-in-law's carelessness, why not take over some of the burden of running her home? Offer to do the jobs that require the most effort and energy, such as sweeping, and let her do the easier tasks. Then she won't feel that she is being pushed out of the management of her home but she will welcome your help.

The carelessness that you have noticed in her housekeeping spreads to her appearance. Added to the fact that old people are less interested in clothes and good grooming than they were when they were younger is general lack of energy.

Once again, you can help your mother-in-law here. Offer to help her put her dress on, if it is hard to get on straight, offer to fasten it or put a pin at the neck, and suggest that you will fix her hair to make it more stylish and becoming.

You can do a lot to improve her appearance without offending her if you go about it tactfully. Your main problem, as time goes on, will be that she will lean more and more heavily on you when her strength fails and she will let you take over things she now does.

Dr. Hurlock will help you with family problems. Write her in care of this newspaper.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Look, Men! Here's How Women Want You to Act

We constantly read advice about "how to hold your man," "how to get your man," and "what men like in women."

Seldom are the tables turned so that the little woman can air her opinions about what she likes in a man.

Now so long ago I invited both men and women to write to me about what each likes or dislikes in the opposite sex. This turned into a kind of free-for-all, with everyone getting something out of his or her chest. Anyway it let off a lot of steam.

I read the other day that one city has made a survey about what secretaries don't like in their bosses. It seems that they do not like them to appear old and decrepit, especially when this means that they (the secretaries) have to do all kinds of chores like opening or lowering windows. Some of the other complaints which occurred most often were, messing with office supplies, blowing smoke in their direction while dictating, reading over their shoulder while they type and keeping them late with last-minute dictation which could have been avoided.

I imagine all women dislike the same type things because they all highly appreciate polite and thoughtful manners. This is probably number one on the feminine list. Both wives and secretaries resent being taken for granted in the small amenities of daily living.

Thoughtful consideration in small ways is always heady stuff for any woman. She forgives a lot of big faults if she is treated to the luxury of awareness.

Women also dislike poor grooming in men. Many men are careless in this matter, many who demand meticulous grooming in their wives, secretaries or dates.

Women bewail lack of conversation at the dinner table and during the evening. The wife has often been at home all day long and she longs for adult masculine companionship. The rattle of children and dishes is not enough.

Secretaries and wives like vigorous successful looking men. It makes them feel more important to work for, or to be married to a man, who appears vital and energetic. That is why they dislike poor grooming and old age mannerisms. They have a stake in the man they are married to or for whom they work.

There you are, men! I have given you the low-down. Now it's up to you!

In case a bay window is adding years to your appearance and taking years from your life, you may want my "Short Routine for Men." If so, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 20 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Proud Grandparents Live in City

Recently christened at Holy Trinity Church, Vancouver, by Rev. G. E. Pratt, was Jo Anne Margaret, eight months, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rogers of the mainland city. Present were Mrs. Mary Henson, San Francisco, and Mrs. G. F. Shipley, Jo Anne's grandmother, who flew from Victoria for the occasion. The baby is the great-granddaughter of Mrs. J. Northcott, Victoria, and Mrs. Ellen Shipley, Calgary. Her godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Burt Freestone of Victoria and Mrs. Richard Gray, Vancouver.

Young Susan Marie Poskitt, who received her names in a recent ceremony in Christ Church Cathedral, with Dean P. R. Beattie officiating, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hudson and Mr. James Poskitt and the late Mrs. Poskitt, all of Victoria. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. Murray Poskitt, formerly of this city and now of Chemainus, V.I. Godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Henderson and Mrs. Alan Husband. Following the christening ceremony a tea was held at the Hollywood Crescent home of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson. The baby was for the ceremony a christening robe that had belonged to her maternal great-grandfather. (Photo by Jus-Rite Studios.)

SYMPHONY STIRS DEEP ENTHUSIASM

BY AUDREY S.T.D. JOHNSON

For the first time in its 12 seasons, the Victoria Symphony Orchestra offered dual pianists as the star attraction of Monday night's concert. Nora Haimberger and Charles Palmer appeared before a capacity audience, playing the Bach two-piano Concerto in C Minor and the Mozart E Flat Major Concerto.

The all Bach and Mozart program started off delightfully with the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," a thoroughly Mozartean performance, crisp, elegant, lyrical and exuberant. This was vital, controlled playing—the orchestra at its best.

In fact, the orchestra was so much at the peak of its form last night that it rather overshadowed its guest artists. In the concluding Bach ballet suite, "The Wise Virgins," there was such brilliance of execution and color, so much textural depth and verve, that the audience barely restrained applause mid-way through the suite.

The William Walton arrangement, made for the Sadler's Wells Ballet Company, contributes much to the concert virtuosity of the chorale episodes. "Ah! How Ephemeral" and "Sheep May Safely Graze"; but the broad contrapuntal themes and the great inspirational level of the work convey a tremendous emotional force.

Both Miss Haimberger and Mr. Palmer have shown us on previous occasions that they are finely accomplished pianists and have great integrity and breadth as musicians, which is by no means always the case.

Their devotion to the style, thought and concept of the composers on last night's program was exact. It would be impossible to quarrel with the authenticity of their "chamber"-like interpretation of the Bach Concerto, for example.

At no point were they betrayed, having settled on a range of dynamics that would approximate the original concept, into an overbuilt crescendo. But herein lies the basis for criticism. The performance was a shade too academic to be effective in so large an auditorium. The careful restraint had a dulling effect that resulted in too little contrast between the three movements.

This overall flatness tended to lead one's ear away from much that was beautiful in detail. The Mozart came to life much more fully. A pearly delicacy marked certain passages; there were moments of enchanting beauty in some quality and shapeliness. It never quite stilted—needing a freer rein—but it was a fine piece of piano-craftsmanship, sincere and therefore admirable.

Under Hans Gruber's authoritative beat, the orchestra gave firm support in each case, revealing both security in accompaniment and solo efficiency.

This being the last regular concert before Christmas, Gruber presented the enthusiastic audience with a Christmas present—an encore wrapped up in orchestral strings: The Bach Air, from the Suite in D.

Scot Nationals Blamed for Bomb

EDINBURGH, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Authorities in Edinburgh believe Scottish Nationalists were responsible for planting a home-made bomb in a metal letterbox. An inscription on the envelope containing the bomb indicated it was a protest against the decision to erect letter boxes in Scotland proclaiming the Queen as Elizabeth Second. The Nationals insist the Queen is Elizabeth First of Scotland since the first Elizabeth did not rule Scotland.

Esquimalt Loses Cut of Fees

Esquimalt Council Monday night decided to yield its 10 per cent share of fees for electrical wiring inspection services carried out by Victoria rather than forego the service. The city suggested that the service has represented a financial loss and were in favor of asking provincial authorities to take over the safety inspections unless Esquimalt would be willing to forego the 10 per cent they had previously retained. Council supported Reeve A. C. Wurtele's view there would be a time waste if the province took over the task.

Comics in Clericals Romp on York Boards

By DAVE STOCK

York Players ran about their stage with joyous abandon Monday, and the opening-night audience, which went to see how, laughed merrily at their frantic antics and enjoyed it almost as much as the actors.

"See How They Run," the fifth presentation of the recently established York company, was written by Philip King, as it says in the program, as a riotous comedy. The York Players pulled out all the stops to give it the full treatment.

No less than 25 per cent of the male cast pops up on cue in clerical garb.

Individual starring honors must go to Constance Wright, an amateur from the St. Luke's Players Club, making her first appearance with the York company as a guest artist.

As the old maid village queen, Miss Skilton, who pokes her nose in everyone else's business, Miss Wright was superb.

Her delivery of such lines as "There seems to be something wrong with my inner tube," made them the funniest in the show.

Michael Rothery, a young man of considerable and versatile talent, fared well as the timid village vicar, and Monica Dudley did a fine job as his American actress wife.

It falls to Miss Dudley's lot to keep all the shenanigans on the gallop, yet related. Her voice reaches the audience even before the curtain goes up—while she is "lost to the world" in her bathtub. She's on the go practically the whole of the time from then until she utters the play's last line.

Jack Ammon, with the help of padding, cut a fine figure as the bishop. Maurice Corbett perhaps could have been more meek and mild in the lesser role as the Rev. Arthur Humphrey.

Robert Tabor, who always seems to draw a part where he can shout at the top of his lungs, put plenty of life and noise into it.

Mary Hincks was good as the maid.

Gordon Matthews was the fierce-looking, though somehow unbelievable villain of the piece, who provided much merriment, though unintentionally, it seemed, by trying to shove a large revolver into a too-small pocket.

The lining of which was inside.

Alexander Gray made a gruff British army sergeant.

Directed by Dewey Harless and Ian Thorne, "See How They Run" will play at the York for this week only. Performances are scheduled for every night at 8 with a matinee added on Saturday.

Those who liked "Curtain Up" will enjoy this one.

Commission Claim Not Sound in Law

Action taken by Thomas D. Marson, 1475 Ocean View, against Charles Jones, 2220 Cook Street, for a $500 commission claimed, was dismissed by Judge Joseph Clearhue in County Court Monday.

Marson claimed he had been promised a commission if he would introduce Jones, a salesman, to a person who was in the market for a certain piece of machinery. The plaintiff said he made the introduction and Jones made the sale, but that he had been paid nothing.

Jones told the court he had not received a commission for himself from the sale.

Judge Clearhue dismissed the action, stating the promise alleged to have been made was too indefinite to be considered a legal contract.

AA (Ocean class) BB (Wartime) CC (Don't Miss) DD (For Busy Days) EE (To not in time)

(BB PLUS) "EVERYTHING I HAVE IS YOURS" (Capitol): I like the Champions. Their dancing is fresh and virile and in "Everything I Have Is Yours" the husband-and-wife team of Marge and Gower show a flair for acting and comedy that will improve with experience.

The plot in brief: Pamela and Chuck Hubbard (the Champions) are a happily married song-and-dance team. When the show opens they have hit their ultimate after years of grind—Broadway.

Unfortunately, however, as the curtain rings down on a smash hit opening night Pamela finds she is going to have a baby. And that's that as her doctor forbids dancing until after the event.

After Chuck recovers from the shock (he always has the same sympathetic pains and ills as his wife) he keeps the show going with Pam's understudy, Sybil Meriden (Monica Lewis). From there on in for the next five years Chuck plays smash hit after smash hit while Pam stays with Pam Jr. (Mimi Gibson) in the house Chuck bought for them in Connecticut.

Eventually, of course, she feels the stirrings to get back into show business, especially as she has become very jealous of her co-star. I think you can just about guess the rest.

Although the play was well directed by Robert Z. Leonard, and the Champions had excellent support in Monica Lewis, Dennis O'Keefe as producer Alec Tackabury, and in newcomer Dean Miller, I was regretful about the plot. Surely when you get a young, good-looking couple like the Champions you can supply them with a more romantic story than that. And I think, also, that there could have been more comedy relief.

Their dancing was good but I wasn't too keen on some of the choreography. Best of all I liked their solos, one Gower doing a doll dance for young Mimi Gibson (aged three-and-a-half) and Marge's turn that gets her back into showbiz after her long term as housewife.

However, no doubt all these things will come eventually for the young dancing stars of "Showboat" and "Lovely to Look At." Meanwhile, it's nice to see them out on their own with plenty of elbow room to show what they can do.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—Allan Savitt president of a New York publicity firm, has filed suit seeking $250,000 apiece from Mickey Mantle, star outfielder of the New York Yankees, Inc., and Murray Kaufman.

The suit charges that Mantle, at the persuasion of the ball club and Kaufman, broke a contract with the publicity agent.

TORONTO, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Gerry Kesseling, 23-year-old Kitchener shotsmith, was named Ontario's top amateur golfer Monday for the second straight year.

Kesseling won both the 1952 Ontario Amateur and the Open, the second Ontario golfer ever to capture both honors in one year.

In Willingdon Cup interprovincial team play this year, he tied the record held jointly by Jim Robertson, of Vancouver, and Westlock, with a blazing 138 for 36 holes.

P.M.'s Discuss Huge Resource Development

LONDON, Dec. 9 (Reuters)—Immense projects for the expanded development of the Commonwealth's resources in fields ranging from food production to supplies of gold and uranium have been outlined by the Commonwealth's prime ministers, now nearing the end of a 10-day economic conference here.

Plans have been made to spend hundreds of millions of pounds sterling. A number of the projects are already under way.

The projects of individual countries examined by the conference include increased food production and more oil refining in Britain and Australia, large-scale irrigation plans in Ceylon, stepping up of gold and uranium production in South Africa and an industrial program for jute, wool and cotton in Pakistan.

Southern Rhodesia plans to increase her exports of tobacco, chrome and copper. India has a five-year plan which will raise food production, and there are 50 other projects in the colonies for developing their rich natural resources.

The plans will depend on adequate capital from three sources—domestic investment, government grants, and subsidies and investments from outside the sterling area.

YELLOW 'NAUSEATING'

New Hospital Colors Urged by Therapist

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 9 (CP)—An occupational therapist told Australian hospital administrators at a recent conference that they should get away from the traditional white or cream or even pink of hospital wards.

The therapist, Madeline Drayton, said that women's wards should be painted mauve, blue or violet; men's, green or blue; nerve wards, yellow; and other wards in bright tones to relieve monotony.

But doctors did not agree. One superintendent said yellow would be "perfectly nauseating" for

Two Women Accused of Aiding In Extortion of City Chinese

Two white women residents of Victoria's Chinatown were responsible for "putting the finger" on moneyed Chinese for the Chinese Red extortionists last year, according to Mrs. Muriel Cordaux Hosken.

The outspoken associate editor of Vancouver's bilingual Chinese newspaper told Monday's Geyo meeting that in 1951 over $2,000,000 was sent out of B.C. alone to Red authorities in a desperate attempt to ransom the lives of Communist prisoners.

Mrs. Hosken said she has been working on these and similar matters in co-operation with federal government intelligence. She added that there is no extortion money going now, that the Orientals here have learned that even when they have stripped themselves of all their wealth, the report of the relative's death eventually comes.

BROUGHT WAR NEWS

Mrs. Hosken, who has spent many years in China, claims to have brought first tidings of the impending Korean conflict when she left China in 1950, after being badly beaten by the Communists.

She said her inside knowledge of the Chinese scene today comes to her through news sources connected with the newspaper, and

HOME GARDEN

By JACK BEASTALL

Dear Fred:

You have a most unusual way of describing plants, and I must admit that your descriptions would have a wider appeal than would those of the botanist.

The "blonde" with a home permanent who looks like one of the Braxton kids" about which (or whom) you enquire, is commonly known as Curly Kale. In your vegetable gardening book, the English one, you will find full cultural directions under the heading of "cole" or "borecole."

To save you writing to know why kale is listed under cole and so forth, here is the answer. Cole comes from the Latin coils or caulis (a stem) which became Cawel in Anglo-Saxon, Kohl in German, and finally Kale in English, each being another name for cabbage in some form.

English writers still prefer Borecole for Kale, and some Canadian seed catalogues list the seed in the same way.

Regardless of which name you prefer, Curly Kale is about the most useful and accommodating of vegetable the home gardener can grow. In the first place it is entirely winter hardy, more so than head cabbages. Secondly, it is milder in flavor, the Scotch Curled (tall or dwarf) being considered best. Thirdly, it is one of those cut-and-come-again vegetables, giving a continuous supply of greens from November until the end of June, if need be.

Like parsnips, its flavor is improved after a few good frosts, and it should never be cut before. The correct method of cutting is to remove the heads or centres first, and this promotes the growth of shoots down the stem. These side growths are ready to use when about four inches long and tender enough to remove with thumb and finger.

A heavy cold spell retards the production of side shoots, and under these conditions we use the more tender leaves on the upper portion of the plants. The leaves may be picked and used even when the plant is buried under snow.

Yours for more kale in the home garden.—Jack.

"Can you imagine this Lady Wonder wanting to be a human?" "Seems obvious she's got no horse sense."

LADY WONDER DOESN'T BLUNDER

Typing Equine Teaches Scribe Something About 'Horse Sense'

The continent's curiosity has been aroused by Lady Wonder, Richmond's "talking" horse. Police credit the animal with giving them a clue to a Massachusetts child, missing for nearly two years. "Hard to believe," Associated Press reporter Paul Duke thought so, too, so he paid a visit to Lady's stall for an "interview." Here's what he found.

By PAUL DUKE

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 9 (AP)—So you're skeptical about Lady Wonder, Richmond's incredible "talking" horse?

So was this reporter when he went out to "interview" her. A horse that can predict the future and reel off facts like a child prodigy? Bunk, I thought. But after a half-hour's "chat" with Lady I came away from her stall wondering whether there isn't more fact than fiction to horse sense.

Lots of other folk are wondering the same thing now that Lady has been credited with providing the "tip" that led to discovery of the body of Danny Matson, a four-year-old child missing from his Quincy, Mass., home for nearly two years.

Since Sunday, Lady's mistress, Claudia Fonda, has been deluged with calls from persons who want the 27-year-old horse quizzed on everything from stolen bicycles to wildcat oil wells.

Mrs. Fonda won't take the requests by telephone, declaring that Lady is not at her best unless the questioner is on hand to get the answer straight from the horse's mouth.

Lady flabbergasted me when she correctly answered most of the 15 questions I fired at her.

She does her answering by poking her chin at levers extending out from tiny slides containing numbers and letters. When she touches the levers, the numbers and letters shoot up, spelling out her answers.

Mrs. Fonda stood beside Lady, repeating the questions into the mare's ear.

Lady started out perfectly by pecking out my name. When I asked her where I was born, she spelled out Bethlehem, Pa.—the right answer. When I asked her how much money I make weekly, she gave the exact dollars-and-cents figure.

She flubbed it when I asked her where I went to school. But two questions later, she named the school in a delayed-action reply.

Lady has been playing this question-and-answer game for more than 20 years. The folks who visit her at Mrs. Fonda's small frame house on the edge of town get three questions for $1.

In 1928, two Duke University psychology professors tested her and concluded:

"There appear to be no loopholes, no reasonable possibility for signalling, either of a conscious or unconscious character."

In 1946, Dr. Thomas L. Garrett, New York psychologist, said he could find "no trickery involved."

I thought about a tip-off system between Lady and her mistress. But she has answered questions when Mrs. Fonda wasn't nearby. How does Lady do it?

I asked Lady that. She slowly spelled out "m-i-n-d."

I asked her if she'd like to be a human.

"Yes," came the answer.

Royal Family Arranging Yule Party

LONDON, Dec. 9 (Reuters)—The Royal Family is preparing for its usual Christmas party at Sandringham, the Queen's Norfolk estate, court circles said today.

The Queen will follow family tradition by broadcasting to the Commonwealth Christmas Day.

Her two children, Prince Charles, 4, and Princess Anne, 2, will have two young cousins with them at Sandringham: Prince William, 11, and Prince Richard, 8, sons of the Duke of Gloucester.

The family party will also include Queen Mother Elizabeth, Princess Margaret, Queen Mary, who has recovered from a cold which confined her to her home for a month, and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000-ton cruiser and the men who have been designated cabinet members shunned questioners.

Recommendation that they re-nounce last year's wage contract will be made to woodworkers in British Columbia's southern interior by their union policy committee.

But the International Woodworkers of America, C.I.O., will not take the recommendation to its interior membership until operators have reopened their mills.

L. J. A. Tees, spokesman for the operators, said the I.W.A.'s proposal, made by I.W.A. president Stewart Alsbury, will be forwarded to interior operators "but we are sure they will not accept it."

"The lumber mills will not open until the union has signed the contract," he said.

Both statements were made following a meeting before the provincial Labor Relations Board. Operators will give their official answer to the union proposal at a meeting before the board Dec. 11.

The I.W.A. had demanded an increase of 3½ cents an hour on top of the present basic wage of $1.29½ hourly, and three paid statutory holidays.

Foreign Legion Flying Into Riot-Torn Morocco

50 Dead, 200 Wounded; Whites Being Evacuated

CASABLANCA, Morocco, Dec. 9 (CP)—Police today began a large-scale evacuation of French and other Europeans residents from native-populated quarters of this nationalist-troubled North African metropolis after bloody rioting killed 50 persons.

The evacuees were moved to safer residential quarters.

Latest police figures indicated 50 persons including eight Europeans had been killed in the widespread rioting Sunday and Monday and that 74 persons had been wounded, including seven Europeans.

Reuters placed the wounded figure at more than 200 and said 60 were in hospitals. The news agency reported eight Europeans were killed and 12 were wounded.

To prevent new outbreaks of rioting, the French flew 400 Foreign Legion troops to this city of 600,000.

The Legionnaires were brought in four planes from Agadir, 270 miles from this city of 600,000. Tanks and armored cars patrolled the streets and tightly ringed the Arab quarter where the rioting first broke out Sunday.

Some of the Europeans were so brutally attacked that even their sex could not be determined. Others were torn to pieces and burned.

The mobs whipped up by leaders' protests against the murder last week of a labor leader in the adjoining protectorate of Tunisia—wielded razor blades fixed on sticks. Shovelheads sharpened to dagger-keenness, and swung heavy iron balls on chains to crack skulls. Others grabbed bricks and knuckle-dusters.

Three labor leaders who Monday demanded the murder of "traitors" to the Moroccan independence movement were among about 140 natives arrested by the police.

Nearly Reaches Revolutionary Fury

The disorders, which reached nearly revolutionary proportions, broke in sympathy with Tunisian workers whose leader, Farhat Hached, was machine-gunned and beaten to death last week.

Demonstrators attacked a European couple and their three small children today as they drove in a truck along a street. The woman was hurt on the head and her husband on the arm, but they managed to reach their home.

The local Moroccan pasha sent criers into the town pleading with the merchants to keep shops open to provide food supplies.

Police laid virtual siege to headquarters of the General Labor Federation, reported to be communist-controlled, where several hundred demonstrators took refuge when Moroccan soldiers charged them Monday.

Gen. Augustin Guillaume, the protectorate's French resident general, announced in Rabat that all measures necessary for security were being taken.

Meanwhile, in Tunis, the other trouble spot of French North Africa, the French authorities lifted the 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew established Dec. 5 when Hached's death was announced.

Moroccan Outbreak Threatens World Peace

By PHIL NEWSOM
United Press Foreign News Editor

Events of the last few hours dramatically point up not only the enormity of the task facing President-elect Eisenhower but also the appalling speed with which these events move.

Thus, while Eisenhower and his aides consider the future course of the U.S. in Korea and policy toward the Orient, a long-feared explosion shakes French North Africa.

Centre of the explosion is Morocco in which America has built giant air bases as vital links in the defense chain against Russia.

Shockwaves from the Moroccan flare-up could:

Seriously endanger the French home government which already has been embarrassed by having its troubles with Tunisian and Moroccan nationalists aired in United Nations debate.

Reduce French contributions to N.A.T.O. and the unified defense of Europe.

Further antagonize the Arab world which is lined up solidly with Tunisian and Moroccan nationalists, thus complicating hopes for unified command for Middle East defense with Arab participation.

Furnish new grist for the Communist propaganda mill, particularly as it attacks the west in its Arab-language broadcasts to the oil-rich Middle East nations.

Finally, disrupt vital oil shipments from the Mideastern fields to Allied Far Eastern bases, ultimately affecting even United States operations in Korea.

The latter point, it may be hoped, probably is far-fetched. But such a linking of events does illustrate both the global nature and the enormity of the task facing United States planners.

WALL OF PREJUDICE?

Following is one of a series of articles by a well-known Montreal editor and publisher who spent September behind the Iron Curtain with an invitation to the World Peace Congress in Peking. October 1 is the national holiday of the new China. It is called the day of liberation in Chinese. Last Oct. 1 was the third anniversary of Mao-Tse-tung's ascent to power. Delegates to the peace congress, therefore, were invited to take part in the celebrations. The show was well worth seeing. In fact it made the whole peace congress worthwhile.

On the eve of the holiday there was a banquet for 2,000 in the hall of the Winter Palace where the meetings were taking place. Mao-Tse-tung presided at the head table and proposed innumerable toasts himself. Around him were his intimates and the guests of honor, mostly accredited diplomats from the people's democracies.

The hall was jam-packed with representatives of all the provinces and all the associations in China. Delegates from national minorities were given good seats. In China there are more than 100 million people who are not Chinese. These are the four great minorities, the Tibetans, the Turks, the Mongols and the Manchurians plus the 50-odd semi-barbarian tribes who live in the mountains where they have been driven by the Chinese over the course of the centuries. I met a chieftain of the Lolos, a friend of my sister's, who spent 30 years as a missionary sister in the Szechouan region.

The tables were groaning with sumptuous food and with the magnificent wines of China. We drank an uncountable number of toasts to Mao-Tse-tung, to the new China, to peace, to the people's democracies and to many other things. It was extraordinary. There were no speeches. We had to get to bed early for the celebrations the following day.

Charged With Health Scheme Defrauding

KENORA, Ont., Dec. 9 (CP)—Three young doctors were fined a total of $5,500 Monday and one was sentenced to three months in jail when they pleaded guilty to fraud in obtaining money from a health scheme which should have been paid by patients.

They are: Dr. Peter Playfair, 33, who was sentenced to three months and fined $2,500 and costs, or serve an additional three months in default, on five charges of false pretences.

Dr. Earl S. Bryngelson, 25, and Dr. Allan M. Torrie, 29, who were fined $1,500 each with the alternative of three months in jail, on the charges.

The amount involved in each charge was $4.

The charges were laid by L. A. Toole, chief Canadian agent of the Benefit Association of Railway Employees which handles the health scheme for employees of the Ontario-Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company.

'STARTLING'

Crown Attorney B. A. Taylor said the scheme was startling. Under the health scheme contract, the patient must pay for the first two calls from the physician; the insurance scheme paid all subsequent bills.

He said that of 44 claims picked at random 42 were found to be fraudulent and each contained from one to two fictitious calls.

"These doctors systematically and ruthlessly milked the company insurance scheme of money that should have been paid by the patients," he said.

Defense counsel W. F. Rogers said the doctors' action "was not a crime because they were poor doctors but because they were poor business men."

He said the doctors' gross error was their judgment arising from inexperience in business affairs. They had not received money to which they were not entitled.

"The insurance company is looking for blood and somebody has got to bear the brunt," he said. Magistrate J. A. Cox, in sentencing the doctors, said "this is a pitiful situation when three men of the medical profession whose personal and professional ethics are supposed to be so high, would deliberately scheme to defraud."

Secrecy Marks Ike's Talks With Cabinet

ABOARD U.S.S. HELENA, Dec. 9 (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower discussed Korean war policy with key cabinet members today in an atmosphere of secrecy rivaling that which surrounded his trip to the battle zone.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000-ton cruiser and the men who have been designated cabinet members shunned questioners.

Recommendation that they re-nounce last year's wage contract will be made to woodworkers in British Columbia's southern interior by their union policy committee.

But the International Woodworkers of America, C.I.O., will not take the recommendation to its interior membership until operators have reopened their mills.

L. J. A. Tees, spokesman for the operators, said the I.W.A.'s proposal, made by I.W.A. president Stewart Alsbury, will be forwarded to interior operators "but we are sure they will not accept it."

"The lumber mills will not open until the union has signed the contract," he said.

Both statements were made following a meeting before the provincial Labor Relations Board. Operators will give their official answer to the union proposal at a meeting before the board Dec. 11.

The I.W.A. had demanded an increase of 3½ cents an hour on top of the present basic wage of $1.29½ hourly, and three paid statutory holidays.

U.N. NOT INSTRUMENT FOR PEACE—VISHINSKY

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky sailed for home today with the comment that the "work of the United Nations General Assembly as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

Vishinsky made the comment to reporters as he boarded the French liner Liberte.

Although the work of the assembly "isn't finished yet," he said, "it shows that the General Assembly does not fulfill its duty for peace. The very fact that the assembly adopted a resolution which is not promoting peace shows that its work as an instrument of peace is not satisfactory."

He apparently referred to U.N. adoption of an Indian resolution for peace in Korea.

Boys' School Shelved in B.C. 'Economy' Drive

$1,000,000 Industrial School For Nanaimo Put 'In Abeyance'

Plans for a new $1,000,000 boys' industrial school at Brannan Lake, near Nanaimo, have been shelved indefinitely by the provincial government in an economy move, it was learned today.

Government officials, who have been working on plans for the long-awaited school, have been informed the proposal is "in abeyance."

The move is apparently the latest in the new government's all-out attempt to bring about a reduction in British Columbia's budget for the first time in years. The 1952-53 budget is $142,000,000.

The Brannan Lake industrial school was offered as a solution to overcrowding in the present institution at Port Coquitlam on the grounds of Essondale.

Law-enforcement and welfare officials throughout the Lower Mainland are bitterly disappointed over the government's decision to scrap the new school which would have housed 150 boys.

The present industrial school was originally intended to accommodate 55 persons, but has been occupied by as many as 120. It is an old vocation building for mentally defective persons.

Lack of space, officials contend, has hampered treatment of boys. The young offenders cannot be kept in the school long enough to get the full benefit of the training program because space is needed for new commitments.

The proposed Brannan Lake school would have been completely modern and given every opportunity for a full vocational training program designed to straighten out the young men and give them a useful trade.

Heavy Seas, Wind Threaten Grounded Ship

ABERDEEN, Wash., Dec. 9 (AP)—Rescue ships fought heavy breakers and time today in an effort to free the 7,207-ton freighter Yorkmar from the surf-churned Washington beach where it ran aground Monday.

(Pacific Salvage Co.'s seagoing tug Salvage King, is on stand-by orders at Victoria. She could reach the scene in 12 hours if called.)

The Coast Guard said there was no immediate fear for the safety of the 37 men aboard the Calmar Steamship Corp. vessel, but an ominous weather forecast demanded full speed in making the attempt to pull the ship into deep water.

As the powerful commercial tug Salvage King of Astoria, Ore., edged in toward the Liberty ship, the Weather Bureau forecast that it would soon be fighting winds up to 40 miles per hour.

Shortly after daybreak, the Salvage King began edging into position to try to get a line aboard.

An air force helicopter piloted by Flt. Lt. Dan Campbell spotted the wreckage between Sechart and Honeymoon Bay, 40 miles northwest of Vancouver, Monday, but bad weather prevented him from landing. Campbell came down to within 100 feet of the wreckage, however, and reported he was certain it was the missing Anson. He saw no sign of life.

A R.C.M.P. search party was turned back by bad weather Monday night when it tried to reach the scene. This morning, a second party including an R.C.M.P. constable, Q.C.A. and Department of Transport officials reached the scene over a logging trail passing within 300 yards of the wreckage.

The party was expected to make its way back within a few hours to report on the identity of the plane and the fate of Capt. Wilson.

Due Back Friday

OTTAWA, Dec. 9 (BUP)—Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent is expected back in the capital Friday from the Commonwealth economic conference in London.

No black mark on my record, sez th' civic candidate. But he'd sure like y' t' make one in th' square opp'site his name.

Things'd be better with them rioters if they had a little Morocco an' a little less loco.

Hear Ike may try t' get th' talkin' horse fer his cabinet. Th' father o' his country needs a good mudder.

Whites Leaving
Morocco TerrorLarge-Scale Evacuation; Foreign Legion Reinforcements Flying In

CASABLANCA, Morocco, Dec. 9 (CP)—Police today began a large-scale evacuation of French and other European residents from native-populated quarters of this nationalist-troubled North African metropolis after bloody rioting killed 50 persons.

The evacuees were moved to safer residential quarters. Latest police figures indicated 50 persons including eight Europeans had been killed in the wide-spread rioting Sunday and Monday and that 74 persons had been wounded, including seven Europeans.

Reuters placed the wounded figure at more than 200 and said 60 were in hospitals. The news agency reported eight Europeans were killed and 12 were wounded. To prevent new outbreaks of rioting, the French flew 400 Foreign Legion troops to this city of 600,000.

The Legionnaires were brought in four planes from Agadir, 270 miles from this city of 600,000. Tanks and armored cars patrolled the streets and tightly ringed the Arab quarter where the rioting first broke out Sunday.

Some of the Europeans were so brutally attacked that even their sex could not be determined. Others were torn to pieces and burned.

"Can you imagine this Lady Wonder wanting to be a human?"
"Seems obvious she's got no horse sense."

LADY WONDER DOESN'T BLUNDER

Typing Equine Teaches Scribe
Something About 'Horse Sense'

The continent's curiosity has been aroused by Lady Wonder, Richmond's "talking" horse. Police credit the animal with giving them a clue to finding a Massachusetts child, missing for nearly two years. Hard to believe? Associated Press reporter Paul Duke thought so too, so he paid a visit to Lady's stall for an "interview." Here's what he found.

By PAUL DUKE
RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 9 (AP)—So you're skeptical about Lady Wonder, Richmond's incredible "talking" horse?

So was this reporter when he went out to "interview" her. A horse that can predict the future and reel off facts like a child prodigy? Bunk, I thought.

But after a half-hour's "chat" with Lady I came away from her stall wondering whether there isn't more fact than fiction to horse sense.

Lots of other folk are wondering the same thing now that Lady has been credited with providing the "tip" that led to discovery of the body of Danny Malson, a four-year-old child missing from his Quincy, Mass., home for nearly two years.

Claudia Fonda, Lady's mistress, Sunday, Lady has been deluged with calls from persons who want the 27-year-old horse quizzed on everything from stolen bicycles to wildcat oil wells.

Mrs. Fonda won't take the requests by telephone, declaring that Lady is not at her best unless the questioner is on hand to get the answer straight from the horse's mouth.

Lady flabbergasted me when she correctly answered most of the 15 questions I fired at her.

She does her answering by poking her chin at levers extending from thin slides containing numbers and letters. When she touches the levers, the numbers and letters shoot up, spelling out her answers.

Mrs. Fonda stood beside Lady, repeating the questions into the mare's ear.

Lady started out perfectly by pecking out my name. When I asked her where I was born, she spelled out Bethlehem, Pa.—the right answer. When I asked her how much money I make weekly, she gave the exact dollars-and-cents figure.

Lady has been playing this question-and-answer game for more than 20 years. The folks who visit her at Mrs. Fonda's small frame house on the edge of town get three questions for $1.

In 1928, two Duke University psychology professors tested her and concluded:

"There appear to be no loopholes, no reasonable possibility for signalling, either of a conscious or unconscious character."

I thought about a tip-off system between Lady and her mistress. But she has answered questions when Mrs. Fonda wasn't nearby. How does Lady do it?

I asked Lady that. She slowly spelled out "m-i-n-d." I asked her if she'd like to be a human. "Yes," came the answer.

TV Station KING Plans
Coronation Broadcast

Seattle's television outlet, KING-TV, is making arrangements to broadcast film-recordings of Queen Elizabeth's June 2 coronation just as soon after the event as is possible.

This was the word given The Victoria Daily Times today by R. E. Priede, assistant general manager of the television station.

In a telephone interview from Seattle, Priede said the first coronation pictures would probably be broadcast by his station about two days following the actual event.

Mr. Priede provided further good news for owners of television sets here, in announcing that his station was planning to increase its power to 12 times present strength.

This will be accomplished by increasing electrical power and increasing the height of broadcast antennas, he explained. The work is scheduled to be completed by about next August.

Body of Pilot Being Brought Out By Party

SECHLT, B.C., Dec. 9 (BUP)—A ground party reported back from a 2,500-foot mountain on Sechelt Peninsula this afternoon that plane wreckage was that of a twin-engine Queen Charlotte Airlines plane. The pilot, the only person aboard, Capt. Bruce Wilson, 41, Vancouver, died in the wreckage.

Wilson crashed about the 1,800-foot level Friday on a flight from Vancouver to Comox on Vancouver Island. The ground party reported the Anson was a "total wreck." Pieces of the wing were scattered over a 600-yard radius.

An inquest was held on the mountainside this afternoon and the ground party started the descent with the body that was found wedged in the crumpled fuselage.

SEEN FROM COPTER

An air force helicopter piloted by Flt. Lt. Dan Campbell spotted the wreckage between Sechelt and Honeycomb Bay, 40 miles northwest of Vancouver, Monday, but bad weather prevented him from landing. Campbell came down to within 100 feet of the wreckage, however, and reported he was certain it was the missing Anson. He saw no sign of life.

A R.C.M.P. search party was turned back by bad weather Monday night when it tried to reach the scene. This morning, a second party including an R.C.M.P. constable, Q.C.A. and Department of Transport officials reached the scene over a logging trail passing within 300 yards of the wreckage.

Secrecy Marks
Ike's Talks

ABOARD U.S.S. HELENA, Dec. 9 (UP)—President-elect Eisenhower discussed Korean war policy with key cabinet members today in an atmosphere of secrecy rivaling that which surrounded his trip to the battle zone.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, refused to give any information about the talks to curious newsmen aboard this 17,000-ton cruiser and the men who have been designated cabinet members shunned questioners.

"There appear to be no loopholes, no reasonable possibility for signalling, either of a conscious or unconscious character,"

I thought about a tip-off system between Lady and her mistress. But she has answered questions when Mrs. Fonda wasn't nearby. How does Lady do it?

I asked Lady that. She slowly spelled out "m-i-n-d." I asked her if she'd like to be a human. "Yes," came the answer.

WALL OF PREJUDICE?
Vulture's Claw
On 'Peace Dove'

Exclusive on Vancouver Island

Following is one of a series of articles by a well-known Montreal editor and publisher who spent September behind the Iron Curtain with an invitation to the World Peace Congress in Peking. Fillion is editor of Le Devoir, a French language newspaper noted for its controversial attitude on current problems.

October 1 is the national holiday of the new China. It is called the day of liberation in Chinese. Last Oct. 1 was the third anniversary of Mao-Tse-tung's ascent to power. Delegates to the peace congress, therefore, were invited to take part in the celebrations. The show was well worth seeing. In fact it made the whole peace congress worth-while.

On the eve of the holiday there was a banquet for 2,000 in the hall of the Winter Palace where the meetings were taking place. Mao-Tse-tung presided at the head table and proposed innumerable toasts himself. Around him were his intimates and the guests of honor, mostly accredited diplomats from the people's democracies.

The hall was jam-packed with representatives of all the provinces and all the associations in China. Delegates from national minorities were given good seats. In China there are more than 100 million people who are not Chinese. These are the four great minorities, the Tibetans, the Turks, the Mongols and the Manchurians plus the 50-odd semi-barbarian tribes who live in the mountains where they have been driven by the Chinese over the course of the centuries. I met a chieftain of the Lolos, a friend of my sister's, who spent 30 years as a missionary sister in the Szechouan region.

The tables were groaning with sumptuous food and with the magnificent wines of China. We drank an uncountable number of toasts to Mao-Tse-tung, to the new China, to peace, to the people's democracies and to many other things. It was extraordinary. There were no speeches. We had to get to bed early for the celebrations the following day.

Heavy Seas,
Wind Threaten Grounded Ship

ABERDEEN, Wash., Dec. 9 (AP)—Rescue ships fought heavy breakers and time today in an effort to free the 7,207-ton freighter Yorkmar from the surf-churned Washington beach where it ran aground Monday.

(Pacific Salvage Co.'s seagoing tug Salvage King, is on stand-by orders at Victoria. She could reach the scene in 12 hours if called.)

The Coast Guard said there was no immediate fear for the safety of the 37 men aboard the Calmar Steamship Corp. vessel, but an ominous weather forecast demanded full speed in making the attempt to pull the ship into deep water.

As the powerful commercial tug Salvage Chief of Astoria, Ore., edged in toward the Liberty ship, the Weather Bureau forecast that it would soon be fighting winds up to 40 miles per hour.

Shortly after daybreak, the Salvage Chief began edging into position to try to get a line board.

Vancouver Stocks
